ROXBURY SINGER CLAIMS ROMANCE WITH PHYSICIAN

She has loved him for two years, got a divorce for him, gave up her job for him, believed his assertions that he would get divorced and marry her—and now he accuses her of stealing her own money, a young Roxbury singer declared today against Dr. Herbert N. Gerardell of Brookline.

DROP 'PICKUP GIRL' CHARGES

STAYS IN JAIL AS WITNESS IN SLAYING

Charges against 17-year-old Frances Frada, Cambridge "pickup girl" held in connection with the shooting of two Newton policemen, were dismissed in Newton court today because of "insufficient evidence."

The girl had been held since August 23 in $100,000 bail as a material witness and on a criminal complaint charging her with accessory before the fact of armed assault. She was still held as a witness, however.

Edward P. Simpson, 30-year-old escaped convict, is charged with the shooting of Patrolman Henry G. Bell, who later died, and Patrolman Lawrence E. Murphy, now near death at Newton Hospital.

TAKEN BACK TO JAIL

When the Frada girl appeared in Newton court today on the continuance of her case, having been taken there from East Cambridge jail, her counsel asked the case be dismissed for want of prosecution.

Assistant District Attorney Jeanette Chisholm then informed the court:

"The government has insufficient evidence."

The girl, however, was taken back to East Cambridge jail since she was held in $25,000 as a material witness to the shooting in Middlesex superior court.

Since her arrest and during her stay in jail, the Frada girl protested her innocence, telling police that she just went for a ride with Simpson at his request.

BROUGHT IN ON WRIT

Judge W. Floyd Allen was forced to issue a writ to insure the girl's presence in court today since jail officials would not release her as she was being held as a material witness on the ruling of the superior court.

Stocks Retreat After Brief Spurt

New York, Sept. 13 (AP)—An opening rally of $1 to $5 a share in today's stock market was quickly converted into a selling move that brought general losses of as much or more. There were a few declines ranging from $5 to $11.

Fast the start, the pace soon slowed. Larger offerings began to appear and momentum on the downside increased.

Geneva, Sept. 13 (AP)—The League of Nations today rebuffed an attempt to unseat the Spanish government from its Assembly at the outset of a tense, closely guarded session, which was to hear a Spanish accusation of Italy as a Mediterranean pirate power.

While the assembly met, France and Great Britain assembled a fleet of 60 men-of-war to drive mysterious raiders from the inland sea.

Already there were unconfirmed reports from Spanish Cartagena, on the Mediterranean, that a pirate submarine, her crew still alive, lay crippled under the water.

The Spanish insurgent generalissimo, Francisco Franco, in a letter to the league, contended his government was the only one representing the will of the Spanish people.

But the league credentials' committee decided the credentials of the Valencia delegation were in

Heavy Gale Due In Boston Tonight

Proof Found N.H. Boy Brutally Murdered

By FRANK C. McLEAN
Boston Evening American Staff Reporter

Laconia, N. H., Sept. 13—Conclusive proof that 10-year-old Mark Neville Jensen was murdered is in the possession of authorities investigating the boy's death, the Boston Evening American learned exclusively today.

Establishment of the murder case was revealed after County Solicitor Harold E. Wescott had received an urgent telephone message from Dr. Timothy Leary, of Boston, who performed the autopsy on the boy's battered body.

Leaving hurriedly for Boston with an unnamed New Hampshire pathologist, Wescott quoted Dr. Leary as saying:

"I have something very definite and would like you to come to Boston today."

Wescott, who heretofore has consistently adhered to the theory the boy was a victim of a hit-and-run motorist, made no effort to conceal the significance of his mission.

He expected to reach Dr. Leary's office between 3 and 4 p. m.

'FRIENDS' MAP FREEZE-OUT OF O'HARA

(Another article in the Behind the Scenes Action on R. I. Race War Front by the Insider on Page 18.)

By JAMES J. DELANEY
(Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent)

Providence, R. I., Sept. 13—Striving feverishly to save racing in "Little Rhody," agents of country-wide financial interests with heavy stakes in Narragansett Park met last night in a Boston financial institution.

At this meeting they laid plans to "freeze out" Walter E. O'Hara as Rhode Island state racing czar, it was learned exclusively today by the Boston Evening American.

The group will seek a meeting with Governor Robert E. Quinn today in an effort to stave off the ending of track activities by the State Racing Commission, which, according to reliable reports, may revoke the license of the Narragansett Racing Association and oust O'Hara as president and managing director at a hearing tomorrow afternoon.

A close friend of O'Hara and an acknowledged spokesman for the racing tycoon told the Boston Evening American today O'Hara would definitely not resign as president and general manager of the track.

Aware that a group of stockholders planned to see the governor to bring about a compromise, O'Hara,

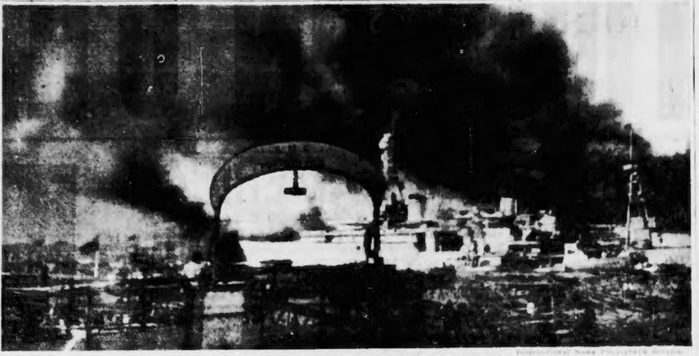
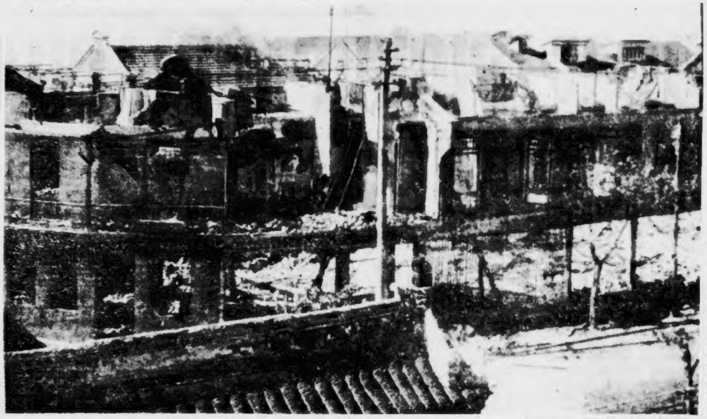
Shanghai Chinese Flee

UNCLE SAM STANDS BY



International News Photograph Service

Symbolic of Uncle Sam's anomalous position in strife-torn China today is this striking picture of the American cruiser Augusta, flagship of the U. S. Asiatic fleet, "standing by" at Shanghai, while black clouds of smoke from the city's bombarded Pootung district dwarf and almost obscure the vessel, swinging idly at its anchor chains.



Chinese guns which bombarded this section of the Chinese city of Shanghai were intelligently directed, for the ruined buildings were occupied exclusively by Japanese who had homes and business places there. High explosive shellfire which rained upon the district and left it a smoking mass of ruins served effective notice that China is no longer safe for military or commercial invaders from Nippon.

TROOPS DIG IN ON WHANGPOO 2ND LINE

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER

Shanghai, Sept. 13 (INS)—The stubborn defenders of Shanghai staged their first large-scale retreat in eight weeks of fighting today, and in answer to Japanese jubilation insisted it was a strategic move to strengthen their lines.

Chinese troops fell back to their second line of defense all along the Whangpoo river. The sensational gains they had made in driving the Japanese to the river bank were wiped out. The once proud civic center of Kiangwan, now a jumble of flame-scarred wreckage, and all adjoining territory fell into Japanese hands.

A total of 330,000 Chinese troops, the full defensive armies of Shanghai, moved back.

Although the Japanese claimed victory and the Chinese pleaded strategy, one thing is obvious. That is, that any territory the Japanese are now occupying in this ferocious struggle is an uninhabitable waste.

WATCHES ADVANCE

Through a telescope I watched Japanese naval troops advancing along the edge of the flames, which were consuming block after block of Chinese Chapei, Hongkew, and Yangtzepoo.

A large fraction of the horizon of Shanghai was blotted by smoke rising half-way into the sky, while beneath, bright patches of flames marked the blazing war front.

An important part of the war is still being fought in a section of the city as big and as densely populated as Brooklyn.

Nobody knows who sets the fires, but wherever the Chinese are forced to fall back, the flames leap up and check the Japanese advance.

Already enough buildings have been destroyed to make a great city, even though the International Settlement remains relatively untouched. Only one Chinese mill within the Settlement is now burning.

DEFENSE AMAZING

That the Chinese manage to continue to resist is almost incredible, in the face of the terrific pounding they are receiving.

Nevertheless the Chinese stick out to the last moment when the Japanese, believing the enemy crushed, attempt to charge, only to find themselves checked and mowed down by sudden machine gun fire from men who ought long ago to have died or fled.

At the end of the first month of active fighting, Chinese prestige is at its highest since the fall of the empire, while even the imperial Japanese fighting officers reluctantly admit that there is a new spirit in China.

order, and the assembly seated it.

The assembly likewise spiked any Mussolinian hopes that the League would expel Ethiopia from membership. No voice was raised against Ethiopia during the session of the credentials' committee.

Neither Italy nor Ethiopia was represented, but the dethroned Emperor, Haile Selassie, sent a letter expressing his continued "faith in the League."

The assembly also received China's appeal against Japanese aggression.

The appeal said Japan had invaded China and was continuing the invasion with all her army, navy and air force.

In a separate communication China also accused Japan of violating all international law and all precepts of humanity.

AMBULANCE CORPS SHOT

The protest particularly referred to alleged Japanese bombing of Red Cross units. It declared also that a Chinese ambulance corps of 43 members was forced by Japanese soldiers to kneel, then was shot down en masse, only three men escaping death.

China expressed a desire for the United States and other nations which are not members of the League, but are interested in world peace, to participate in consideration of her situation. British naval authorities were unable to confirm in any way the Cartagena report, from unofficial Spanish government sources, of the sunken submarine.

The Febus (Spanish) News Agency carried the unconfirmed reports only as "rumors in the streets" of Cartagena. There was no confirmation from any official sources.

The "rumors," Febus said, were that officials had received acoustic telephone messages from the crew trapped when the submarine was sunk by Spanish government gunners.

MAY BRING CRISIS

Spanish military observers based their conviction that the undersea craft had been damaged on the appearance of large amounts of oil on the surface of the water.

Should the boat be raised it likely would answer the grave question that has raised the most serious European crisis since the outbreak of the Spanish civil war a year and three months ago. The Spanish government and Moscow, its ardent supporter, have flatly accused Italian warships of waging indiscriminate war on Mediterranean shipping.

Italy has counter-charged that the Valencia government is responsible for the series of attacks that brought about the determined French and British campaign to sweep the menace from their "life line of empire." Italy, with Germany, recognizes the insurgent regime as the de facto government of Spain.

SEE W R NEAR

An ironic twist of league custom placed Juan Negrin, Premier of the Spanish government, in the President's chair as nearly 50 nations met to consider his country's charges against Italy.

Dr. Negrin opened the Assembly with a sharp warning that powerful world forces are directed toward "destruction of the League of Nations and all those supporting it."

With or without Italy, the patrol will go on and Great Britain and France will carry out the nine-power mandate given them to police the vital Mediterranean trade routes.

Naval officials of the two countries planned to distribute 35 British and 25 French ships, with Britain patrolling the area west of Malta and France the area to the east. The British battleship Repulse, the great battle cruiser Hood, the mightiest man-of-war afloat, and the first destroyer flotilla were at Malta ready for action on Thursday the moment the nine governments formally ratify the Nyon pact.

LIGHT VOTE DUE IN BATTLE FOR CONNERY JOB

Six candidates have entered the special primary to be held Tuesday, September 28, in the Seventh Congressional District to nominate party candidates to fill the unexpired term of the late William P. Connery, Jr., of Lynn.

Candidates for the Democratic nomination are Lawrence J. Connery, of Lynn, brother of the deceased Congressman and formerly his secretary, and State Senator Joseph A. Lagone, Jr., of Boston.

Joseph M. Hargedon, of Andover, withdrew from the Democratic fight, and Charles J. McCarthy, another candidate, was forced to retire when the Ballot Law Commission revealed his nomination papers did not have the proper number of certified signatures.

G. O. P. 4 SEEK SEAT

Four Republicans are seeking nomination—Leonard C. Atkinson, of Winthrop, Senator Langone, ex-Representative C. F. Nelson Pratt, of Saugus, and Representative Edward D. Sirios, of Lawrence.

Dr. Fred G. Bushold, of Lawrence, another candidate, is unopposed in his quest to be nominated by the Union party.

As a result of the 68,487 votes received by William H. McMasters, of Cambridge, in the gubernatorial fight, the Union party is qualified to enter the congressional contest. In order to have a qualified party a political organization must poll [illegible] per cent of the total vote for governor.

Lawrence Connery, because he has inherited the capital friendships and the party affiliations of his brother, is expected to be a favorite in the primary balloting.

Political wiseacres, however, expect a very light vote, and necessarily a close contest.

PRATT FAVORED

Politicians are inclined to think that Sirios and Pratt will poll heavy votes because both in their native cities, Lawrence and Lynn respectively, are candidates for the Republican Congressional nomination.

Many forecasters favor Nelson Pratt for the Republican honors. They feel he has the edge over Sirios because Lynn casts twice as many Republican votes as Lawrence. Pratt, however, has twice been a candidate for Congress and been badly beaten on both occasions.

The Republican machine, as far as can be ascertained, has taken little active interest in the primary. In the last three Congressional fights the district has gone Democratic by pluralities running from 15,000 to 21,000. The last Republican victory in the seventh district was in 1928 when Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook scored a small plurality.

By FRANK K. REILLY

With a new burst of speed, former Governor James M. Curley today widened the gap between himself and School Committeeman Maurice J. Tobin as he continued to hold the lead in the mayoralty straw vote ballot of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

At the same time, District Attorney William J. Foley climbed to third place in the race as his friends poured votes into the offices of these newspapers.

Foley filed nomination papers today with the municipal election commission, in City Hall annex.

A member of the Foley campaign committee said the papers were signed by 25,135 registered voters.

VOLUNTARY SIGNERS

Foley, himself, told newspapermen:

"These signatures are of voters who voluntarily endorse my candidacy. They were obtained without threats or duress."

Former Representative Alfred Santosuosso, of Hyde Park dropped to fourth place and he was trailed by former Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols.

OTHERS SCATTERED

Other candidates continued to receive a scattered vote.

Today's returns indicate that the tug-of-war between former Governor Curley and School Committeeman Tobin has aroused the fighting spirit of members of both political camps. Many of the straw ballots are accompanied by messages predicting victory for one or the other.

The enthusiastic effort of supporters of District Attorney Foley to sweep him to the top of the list of contenders was the chief feature of today's returns. As was the case last week, the majority of the Foley ballots are postmarked from South Boston and Dorchester.

The majority of the votes cast for School Committeeman Tobin today came from Roxbury and Jamaica Plain.

Hyde Park friends of former Governor Curley seemed to be making a concerted effort to put their district on the map in the balloting and it appeared that they have been stirred by the heavy vote which Ward 18 has been consistently casting for former Representative Alfred Santosuosso who resides there.

The greatest Curley vote today was postmarked from Hyde Park. District Attorney Foley received the second largest vote from that place and the Santosuosso tally ranked third.

West Roxbury cast a considerable vote today for Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols. Jeremiah J. McCarthy, of Roslindale, who claims to be the only candidate in the field who was born in Ireland, ran second in the balloting in that area.

The Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser mayoralty straw vote ballot is open to all readers of these newspapers. Each subscriber is urged to take advantage of the opportunity to cast a vote for his or her favorite candidate.

The records of straw votes conducted by these newspapers in other years show that many candidates who were slow starters frequently topped the ticket before the balloting was brought to a close.

DAILY REPORTS

By availing themselves of the opportunity to cast a straw vote for their candidate readers also become active participants in a city-wide movement to determine who are outstanding among the 13 men seeking election as successor to Mayor Mansfield.

The Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser mayoralty straw vote ballot is being conducted without bias. The ballot will not be used to boost the political fortunes of any candidate and accurate reports will be made daily as to the true progress of the tabulation.

Friends of the 13 contenders are urged to place their straw vote ballots in the mails today.

Hospital Bombing Charged to Japs

Hongkong, Sept. 13 (AP) — P. V. Thomas, head of the American Seventh Day Adventist Mission Hospital at Waichow, charged Japanese today with the [illegible] deliberate bombing of the hospital despite the prominent display of American flags.

Thomas, who arrived here today bringing wounded members of his Chinese staff, said Japanese warplanes bombed the hospital for 15 minutes yesterday.

American flags, he declared, were prominently displayed over the mission and the attack was apparently deliberate as there were no military objectives nearby.

A barracks, two miles away, he said, was bombed later and was subjected to a new attack this morning.

Quabbin Worker Killed by Tractor

Falling in front of a 10-ton tractor, Raymond Decorie, 34, of Indian Orchard, was crushed to death at Quabbin Reservoir today.

He was the latest to die as machine-destruction snuffed out the lives of nine other persons on New England highways this week-end.

School Calls 'Miss America'

BEAUTY QUEEN FLEES THRONE

And while the officials, frustrated and weary, declared "she can't do this to us," Miss Bette Cooper, 17-year-old Miss Bertrand Island of Hackettstown and Miss America of 1937, went right on doing it.

It's being a complete and whole-hearted snubbing of the fruits of her victory, a six-week vaudeville contract, a $400 offer for five days on the Steel Pier, and a flying trip to Hollywood for a screen test included.

"No movies, radio or vaudeville for me," she said today. "I'm going to stay in bed and get rid of this cold, and then back to school for me."

STREAMLINED GIRL

A streamlined youngster of 5 feet 6 inches and 130 well-placed pounds, Miss Cooper is strictly an amateur beauty with no modern designs. She slipped from America's playground yesterday a few hours after her crowning, leaving behind a bewildered group of sponsors, officials and contest-padded dignitaries.

Mayor C. D. White, [illegible] city commissioners, George Tyson, pageant director, Edward [illegible], chairman of the [illegible] committee, and sundry others [illegible] in rapid impromptu conferences.

They conferred and conferred but the answer still came out the same—Miss America of 1937 was gone and what's more she wasn't coming back. "Very peculiar," they muttered, lifting eyebrows.

MEETS ADONIS

Meanwhile, [illegible] Miss Cooper arrived at her Hackettstown home with a [illegible] of [illegible] young men and [illegible] that as far as she was concerned the Atlantic City beauty pageant had passed into the limbo of soon-forgotten things.

She admitted she had gotten something from the affair, and that was a blossoming acquaintance with Lewis Off, one of the [illegible] and son of an Atlantic City business man and city commissioner.

Her father, Le Roy Cooper, a state highway department engineer, summed it up in a way:

"It was too strenuous for Bette. Her mother and I feel she's too young for all that fuss. And besides she has a cold and needs a rest."

Little Hope Held For Czech Leader

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 13 (INS)—All amusements were cancelled throughout the country today as the nation anxiously awaited word from the bedside of former President Thomas G. Masaryk.

After suffering a relapse with the possibility that he has [illegible] pneumonia, the 87-year-old statesman was believed to have little chance to recover. President Eduard Benes hastened to his side at Castl Lany.

O. O. McINTYRE, read his famous column, "New York Day by Day," every day in the Boston American

ILLNESS DIMS HER GLORY

Abdicating at the height of her reign, because she has a cold and wants to go back to school, "Miss America of 1937," chosen "Queen of Beauty" at Atlantic City contest, shown here leaving laughingly. She walked out on the show and returned home, ignoring stage, screen and posing offers. She is Miss Bette Cooper, 17, of Hackettstown, N. J.

SOCIETY Girl Holds 2 JOBS

SHE'S MODEL AND SINGER

Leslie Blake, society bud, who turned from modelling "just for fun" to earning a livelihood by it, finds the life of a "deb" innocuous and dull beside her work as a living model.

"I began doing it for fun. And then necessity dictated my pursuing it for a career," said the young society girl today.

From modeling, she also turned to a blues singer, which pastime she finds even more interesting.

"Traveling salesmen present a minor problem in the art of showing off clothes. But in nightclub singing there are even greater difficulties. Such as strange gentlemen sending insistent notes that you join them at their table, and even more familiar," she said.

WOULDN'T TRADE

Despite these problems, Miss Blake insists she would exchange the idle pleasure-seeking life of a debutante for either career, that of a model or a blues singer.

"I've got to have my teeth into something. Even if I were born with a 100 million, which I was not," the young lady went on as she sat before a burning fire in the spacious summer home of her parents in Cohasset.

"Modelling is fun and it pays well. I love to wear clothes and I earn $5 a day at it," she said.

Leslie models for the larger department stores and has sung the latest blues songs.

So she is speaking from practical experience. But she also has been educated in a French convent and made a debut into Boston's [illegible].

MORE PUNISHMENT

"I don't see how a girl, even if no mercenary ideas motivated her doing otherwise, can lead the wholly idle pleasure-seeking life of tennis, teas and dances. However, it's nice in between times," she continued.

In addition to the ordinary hard knocks of a model's life including the workaday wisecracks of traveling salesmen and the insinuating notes of visiting inebriates in night clubs, Miss Leslie Blake as a socialite has had to take even more punishment.

"I've taken a beating from my friends ever since I began modeling and working. But it's been worth it," she said.

Hunt Boys Missing With $500 Cash

Police instituted search for the young travelers when John Koschen, of Portsmouth street, Brighton, reported his son, Stanley, 17, had taken the money from his desk. He said he thought another boy was with his son.

Authorities asked New York police to check railroad and bus terminals. The Koschen youth is 5 feet, 9 inches, weighs 160 and has black hair.

"ANDY" AND BRIDE START RIGHT

[illegible] through the lake region, police and other investigators intensified their search in the vicinity of the desolate woodland patch where the boy was murdered last Friday night.

Supplementing a tentative conclusion that the boy may have been bludgeoned to death, Patrolman Paul Swenson retrieved a discarded pair of overalls in a hedge bordering Union avenue, Lakeport.

It was in a combination store, filling station and garage operated by Elmer Brooks in Union avenue that the murdered child was believed last seen alive.

VITAL DISCOVERY

The rain-soaked overalls were stained with innumerable dark spots, which might be dried blood, police declared. A sodden white handkerchief was found in a pocket.

Emphasizing the importance of this discovery, authorities recalled that grease stains were found on the arms and legs of the slain child.

The overalls will be sent to Dr. Joseph T. Walker, Massachusetts state police chemist, for analysis.

Brooks today said he was somewhat hazy as to his identification of the boy who entered his place at dusk Friday night and asked for a "bag big enough to hold a peck."

UNSURE OF IDENTITY

The storekeeper said he told the police he did not know whether the boy was Mark Swenson. He did recall, however, that he wore sneakers and no socks and that his hair was light.

He said the boy slowly inspected the bag he gave him and left after announcing:

"I guess that'll be all right."

Authorities evinced interest today in another fresh tire track found at the side of Lake Shore road, in the direction the boy would have taken on leaving the store.

Before departing for Boston, Wescott professed interest in a report that a small, dark coupe had been seen early Friday evening a short distance from the scene of the crime. Ordering a general search for the vehicle, he prophesied:

"I think we ought to be able to find that car all right. This is most interesting news we have received so far. I will have plenty of policemen on the job today."

While volunteers ranged through the rain-soaked countryside today simple funeral services for the child were held in St. Joseph's Church here.

Not more than 25 persons, nearly half of them relatives, were in the church when the tiny gray casket was taken down the aisle by three uncles of the dead child.

MOTHER WEEPS

Prostrated since her son's body was found Saturday, Mrs. Mary Jensen sobbed hysterically as she arrived at the church on the arm of her husband, Harry.

While her husband strove to console her, she wept bitterly throughout the brief funeral mass.

Later she insisted on making the 60-mile automobile journey to Portsmouth, where the child was to be buried in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Three candles on each side of the casket flickered in the church as the Rev. Edmund Quirk, pastor of Lady [illegible] the Lake Church, at Lakeport, said the funeral mass.

NEIGHBORS AT MASS

In addition to the boy's relatives, a choir of seven girls, four altar boys and a dozen neighbors were in the church. Among the townsfolk was Chief of Police George N. Hubbard.

The bearers were Edward and John Norton of Portsmouth, uncles of the boy, and a Mr. Scott, also of Portsmouth, described as a great-uncle.

Girl Blames Plight To Romance With 'Dozing Doc' case continued to September 20 that she might obtain counsel.

On Saturday night she was arrested when the Brookline surgeon, who lost a breach of promise suit two years ago to Miss Henrietta M. Zdanowicz, 28, former Cambridge Relief Hospital nurse, walked into Dudley street station with Miss [illegible] and made the larceny charge.

TELLS OF AFFAIR

Maria said she herself brought on the morals charge when she told police of alleged incidents in her affair with the surgeon, who lives with wife and child in Washington street, Brookline.

"I admit I took the money, but it belonged to me," she said. "He had me give up my job. He didn't want me to work. I had been an entertainer in several night clubs around town. He said the position wasn't worthy of me and he didn't want me doing that type of work. So I gave up my job for him, gave up my friends and even gave up my family.

"Then he told me that he needed the money. I, loving him, naturally gave it to him. Then his business improved and he promised me a fur coat. I asked him for the money and he kept putting me off.

"Last Saturday night, when he visited me at my apartment, I asked him for the money again and again he put me off. I got somewhat upset. So when he was apparently asleep, I took the money. I knew he would realize it was I who had taken it, but I didn't think he would act accordingly because we were in love.

I" thought he would know immediately that it was I who took the money and he would say, 'Well, Maria took it,' and let it go at that.

DISILLUSIONED, SHE SAYS

"When he woke up and found his wallet stuffed with paper, he said, 'We're going down to the police station.'

"We both started there, but still I didn't think he meant it. There was so much between us. However, I accompanied him to the police station, where I admitted everything.

"I have been loving him all this time and thought he loved me. Admittedly I have been the other woman in his life, but I thought some day I would be his wife.

"I guess I'm just another disillusioned woman."

Bares Love, Then Takes Poison

Girl Collapses at Jack Doyle's Feet

Chicago, Sept. 13 (INS)—How a pretty, young, redheaded woman rushed up to Jack Doyle, handsome prize-fighting movie actor, at a swank cafe, cried out that he was the man she loved and then drank a poison potion, was described today in a copyright dispatch from Hollywood to the Chicago Evening American.

The dramatic scene occurred [illegible] night in the Knickerbocker Hotel cafe and was seen by hundreds of society and cinema world figures.

The girl, who is expected to recover, gave her name as Betty Lou Strathouse, 22, dancing instructor and player of minor movie parts. She was seated alone at a table when Doyle and a party entered.

With a bright red cup in her hand she ran to his table crying:

"You are the man I love."

She drank the contents, collapsed and was taken to a hospital in Doyle's automobile. Doyle said he has known the girl slightly.

WORK MORE FUN THAN LIFE OF IDLE EASE

'MONEYED MEN' ACT TO FORCE OUT O'HARA

through his spokesman, was reported to have said that he would "stay in and fight."

"I am going to fight right to the end," O'Hara was quoted as saying when questioned at the track.

STAKES ALL ON COURT

O'Hara, it was reliably reported, is staking his future on remaining as the 'Gansett mogul on the decision of the court. His attorneys are preparing to seek a restraining order blocking tomorrow's hearing on seven charges filed against O'Hara and the Narragansett Racing Association.

Present at yesterday's closed conference were figures prominent in New England social and financial circles and representatives of groups from the Pacific Coast, New York, Chicago, Providence and Washington, an authoritative source declared.

Meanwhile, at another secret meeting today in a downtown Boston attorney's office, the New England Anti-Gambling Association, Inc., will lay plans for a campaign to drive the "sport of kings" entirely out of existence in this section of the United States.

News of the session was revealed exclusively to the Boston Sunday Advertiser by former State Senator Henry Parkman, Jr., one of the organizers of the group, who declared:

"We will show the people that betting on horse races is a straight losing proposition."

Their meeting followed closely upon allegations by the governor that three filing cases crammed with track records had been spirited away on Labor Day before State auditors were allowed access to the books and that the racing mogul has been wagering an average of $4000 a day during the present race meeting, according to State auditors.

COMMON-SENSE PLEA

It was understood that these persons will ask Quinn to adopt a "common-sense" attitude toward the situation and subvert his political and personal feud with the track head in order to prevent huge losses to stockholders in the association.

They have definitely concluded, the Boston Evening American informant asserted, that this desirable result from their standpoint cannot be achieved while O'Hara is still in the picture.

Therefore, what they will propose to the governor will probably be along the following lines, the informant declared:

1—Your battle with O'Hara has threatened the existence of racing not only in Rhode Island, but in all of New England as well.

2—We have large investments which we stand to lose both at Narragansett Park and at other tracks in this section of the country.

3—As things stand, O'Hara is a detriment to these investments and we agree that his $50,000-a-year job should be taken from him.

4—If you will agree to preserve our investments, we will do all in our power to terminate O'Hara's tenure at the Pawtucket track.

If agreeable to Quinn, their subsequent course will probably take the form of court action to protect minority stockholder interests in the track.

O'Hara, through friends and relatives, is reported to control 60 per cent of all outstanding stock. Manipulation in this field is therefore out of the question, it was pointed out.

The group, however, it was declared, could easily secure sufficient signatures to a minority stockholder petition. Such a move, incidentally, has been bruited here for several days.

Along the same line, it was felt that Quinn might look with favor upon these proposals if one more concession could be arranged.

That would be that the group exert pressure to drive O'Hara from his post as publisher of the Providence Star Tribune as well.

THORN IN FOES' SIDE

The paper has long been a thorn in the tender political side of his opponents. Through it O'Hra has assailed them at every possible occasion and during the current embroglio the sheet has played a prominent pro-track part.

At the same time, persons high in Rhode Island civic life were reported squirming under the pressure of rumors that O'Hara, before the audit began, took photostatic copies of every business record of the track.

And they know that, pressed to the wall, the Narragansett nabob will leave unused no means of striking back at those who assail him.

O'Hara's reported plunging on races had been charged earlier in the day by Governor Quinn after he had heard from the auditors.

Interviewed at the West Warwick Country Club, the governor told reporters that since the beginning of the present meeting, O'Hara has lost approximately $65,000 in wagers during 16 days of racing.

Quinn said he intended to find out whether the racing czar had been using his own money in placing the bets. According to the auditors, the governor declared, the wagers were made through the regular pari-mutuel machines with certified checks signed by O'Hara and drawn on a Fall River bank.

DELVES IN $27,000 LOAN

The chief executive also told reporters today that he would ask O'Hara to explain the circumstances surrounding a $27,000 loan given him by the Narragansett Racing Association, the details of which were disclosed by the state audit at the track.

This loan, the governor said, was made with O'Hara's race horses and stable equipment as security.

While the governor didn't charge that anything was wrong about this loan, he reiterated that "it would be subject to investigation."

The O'Hara horses in the Araho (O'Hara spelled backward) Stable are Mucho Gusto, valued at $7500; New Deal, $5000, and Dormido, a $1000 claiming horse.

Governor Quinn indicated that he was surprised that O'Hara, recognized as being wealthy, needed such a loan.

SEEKS LIBEL LAW CHANGE

The Governor told his interviewers, meanwhile:

"I have no wish about the continuance of racing in the state, either way. If the people of Rhode Island want the sport, they can have it, but not under O'Hara."

Quinn said he would ask the Legislature at its next session to change the State libel laws to prevent misstatements in the public press. He declared that O'Hara had boasted that both the Governor and Francis J. Kiernan, chairman of the racing division were "in the bag" under the racing mogul's domination.

Later, Quinn said, O'Hara had published untrue reports that he and Kiernan had been his guests at Miami beach. The reports were said to have appeared in O'Hara's newspaper.

Quinn declared also he would ask the Legislature to authorize the hiring and payment by the state of the three track stewards, placing judges, veterinarian and chemist who makes saliva tests.

All but one steward are now paid by the racing association.

SAYS GUNMEN HIRED

In a new development, Quinn charged that gunmen had been employed to intimidate potential witnesses in the proceedings against the racing association. He said:

"I have received letters, and have them now, telling of instructions to certain men to hamper and interfere with horses at the start of races.

"But it is another thing to get such people to testify in a public investigation. There are too many gunmen and gangsters ready to prevent them from giving testimony.

"I have no fear of these underworld characters. They'll get him (O'Hara) before they get me. The only real danger is that the public may be prevented from getting the truth."

BOOKIE "REVENGE" HINT

In line with Quinn's statement that "They'll get him" were reports that a clique of underworld bookies ousted from Narragansett by the track head last year planned to secure revenge by instigating a riot at the park at the next close race.

Their plans may be balked, however, if the track is closed after Tuesday's races, as strongly hinted by usually reliable sources.

The governor took advantage of the situation to reiterate that at no time has he in any way been connected with O'Hara, personally or politically.

DENIES BREAKDOWN

In the face of reports that O'Hara was under a physician's care at his home, the Providence Star Tribune, owned by O'Hara, today released the following statement:

"Walter E. O'Hara observed a quiet week-end. Slept well Saturday and Sunday. Was up early this morning.

"Left for the race track belying reports, sent out by the opposition camp, that he was on the verge of a nervous breakdown.

"However, he declined to talk in the face of the new accusations made against him by the governor but, through a spokesman, said he was content to rest the case with the findings of the court."

The statement concluded by saying that, in due time, the full picture will be given to the public and that "all the issues now obscured to the public will become very plain."

O'Hara was arrested several days ago and released for a further hearing on the libel charges under a total of $10,000 bail after the complainants were named in an article appearing in the Star Tribune. The paper referred to Governor Quinn as "a — — liar."

PREPARE LEGAL FIGHT

Throughout the night, a battery of the racing czar's attorneys, headed by Edward and Laurence Hogan, worked to prepare a plea for an injunction restraining the commission from holding the revocation hearing.

As latest developments indicated that the web of defeat was drawing more tightly about the troubled turfman in the now famous battle of 'Gansett, an exclusive Boston Evening American story that a noted investigator was working on the case was confirmed by a high State House official.

The investigator is a former ace federal agent, who has been instrumental in bringing about some of the most sensational exposes of improper conditions at other tracks throughout the country in recent years.

He will confer with Governor Quinn on facts he has unearthed so far some time today, it was learned.

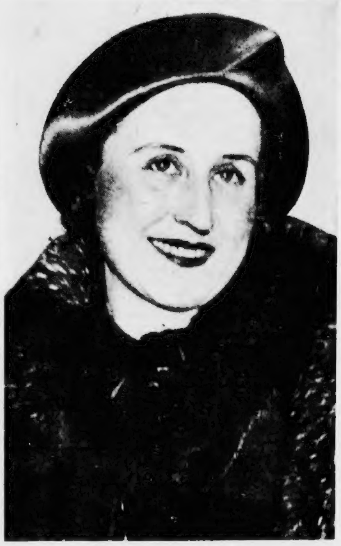
SHOWS HER COURAGE IN CRISIS

'Mrs.' Partner Of Racing Boss



MRS. WALTER E. O'HARA

"We'll Stick Together"

GUIDED RISE TO FAME

Walter O'Hara, spectacular race track king, "bad boy" of Rhode Island politics, powerful and feared, meteoric in his swift rise to wealth and domination, has a "silent partner" in his varied and tempestuous career, whose counsel and wisdom and devotion is all-important to him.

She is Mrs. Cle O'Hara, the wife whose job is her husband's as well as her own, the wife who has guided him, stood by him, launched him to fame, and restrained him from disaster throughout the years of their marriage.

She is no mere figurehead, no mere "stooge" for the vitriolic and temperamental man who has become the biggest financial success in the history of American racing.

Mrs. O'Hara's word is law to Walter O'Hara. Her advice, in matters of financial, political and race track import, is sought and followed by O'Hara with almost pathetic dependence and gratitude.

Single-handed, Mrs. O'Hara runs the Araho stables—the family stables which have developed such winning steeds as New Deal and Mucho Gusto. Hers is the entire responsibility for the training and management of the stables.

But her work does not stop there. She is by her husband's side in every emergency, in every big deal and big crisis of his career—advising, instructing, strengthening his self-confidence, restraining his headlong impulsiveness.

COURAGE AND SENSE

It is a big job. But Mrs. O'Hara has the courage for it, the equipment of a brilliant brain and sturdy common sense, and the devotion and loyalty which is the most important factor in O'Hara's career.

Several times during the year, Mrs. O'Hara goes for a vacation to Florida, California, or Colorado, to rest from the strain of her constant vigilance in her husband's behalf.

O'Hara is literally lost without her. He carries in his pocket two watches. They point to the correct time, in California, Florida, or Colorado.

Whenever an important question has to be answered, an urgent decision reached, O'Hara denies himself to all comers and calls his wife by telephone.

"Cle will be eating supper in California now—I guess I'll call her long-distance," he announces.

And call her he does, consulting with her, asking her advice. Only after he has talked with her does he make a decision and issue a statement.

During the late hectic days when O'Hara has been embroiled with the Rhode Island courts and political powers facing jail, bail and other such weighty matters, Mrs. O'Hara has been steadfastly by his side.

She has been his charming hostess at the luxurious penthouse at the Narragansett track, and she has been his companion and consoler in the courtrooms.

When he was hustled off to police headquarters last Thursday night, under police guard, Mrs. O'Hara did not hesitate.

"I've been through too much with Walter. I don't want to lose him now," she laughed bravely.

And borrowing a car she followed him to the police station.

The devotion of the O'Haras seems to thrive on strife and trouble. Mrs. O'Hara takes it in her stride.

"We'll stick together," she says.

Missing Norwood Boy in California

Wayne Foster, 17, Norwood high school student missing for 18 days, is safe in Redding, Cal., where he has obtained a job, his parents today informed police.

The boy's father, Edward Foster, announced he had received a letter today from his son in which the youth said he "wished he was home and regrets leaving as he did." He did not explain his reason, however, for leaving.

News of the youth's safety came in time for police to call off a searching party that planned to comb the woods today.

2 SALEM MEN KNIFED IN MYSTERY ATTACK

Peabody, Sept. 13—In a mysterious attack, two men were stabbed in the back by two unidentified assailants while walking along Paleologos street here early today.

Victims of the stabbing were Bartholomew Kiley, 25, of Mason street, and John Condon, 26, of Putnam street, both of Salem. Kiley is a brother of Medical Examiner Cornelius J. Kiley.

Both men were taken to the J. B. Thomas Hospital. They told police that they saw their attackers but that they didn't know either of them. According to police, the wounded pair could give no reason for the attack. Police had only a meagre description of the two assailants.

An emergency operation was performed on Kiley this morning by his brother in an effort to save his life.

Both men suffered deep stab wounds which penetrated their lungs. Kiley also suffered wounds about the head and face, and physicians said there was little hope for his recovery.

Condon's condition was also critical. The names of both men were placed on the danger list.

Police questioned three companions of the two wounded men who were walking about 20 yards in front of Condon and Kiley when they were attacked, but gained little information.

The Brighter Side

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.)

Struggling authors may be inspired to renew efforts by the figures just compiled by our statistical bureau on the earnings of one little short story of just a few hundred words.

Damon Runyon

It is a story so short that it would probably be called a "Short Short Short" by the magazine editors of today and they would pay not to exceed $9.85 for it in it's original form, if they accept it in that form at all, which is doubtful, though they have been accepting it in slightly different forms with great avidity for many years.

The earnings of this little story are placed by our statistical bureau at $62,000,000,000.10. Sixty-three billion dollars and ten cents. These figures have not been finally rechecked, and you may allow for the possibility of slight error somewhere in the rough result. We have found a tendency toward carelessness with naughts on the part of our statistical bureau once it gets above one hundred.

IT'S "CINDERELLA"

Books and magazines	$22,000,000,000
Movies	12,000,000,000
Theaters (playwrights and producers)	20,000,000,000
Newspapers	8,000,000,000
Original author	.10

The story referred to is the story of Cinderella.

Possibly you are familiar with it in its original form. If not you certainly are familiar with it in numerous other forms as presented by the public prints, the theater and the screen.

MAY BE GUESS

In all the history of writing there has been no such money producer as the story of Cinderella. We do not know how our statistical bureau arrived at the net to the original author of the story, but we presume that the bureau just took the law of average on nets to original authors down through the ages and made a shrewd guess.

The returns to the movies from the story are low as compared to the public prints of one kind and another because the movies are not yet as old as the public prints. Our statistical department adds a footnote, however, expressing the opinion that in the course of time the movies will greatly exceed the earnings of all others from the little story.

There are at this time no less than three movies on Broadway that are based in a general way on the story of Cinderella. The plot is different in all three, but the motif is the same. We are not saying this as any reflection on the originality of the authors of the movie scenarios. We have used the plot of Cinderella ourself a lot of times. Say, you cannot beat that plot!

HERE'S THE YARN

The story of Cinderella in the original form is the story of a little girl who was made a kitchen drudge by her mean sisters. She was put upon quite some by them, while they went stepping here and there in their finery. It takes only a little variation of this situation to make folks bust right out crying in sympathy with the poor girl, and to get pretty sore at the mean sisters.

A good fairy finally comes along and does tricks with pumpkins and mice, and whatnot, and transforms the drudge into a beautiful gal, and sends her to a ball where she makes a terrific hit with the prince, and loses a glass slipper that will fit no foot but her's, all of which eventuates into her marriage with the prince, and the downfall of those mean sisters, which makes everybody feel pretty good.

Of course this is just a crude statement of the plot, but the motif is, be she ever so humble, a gal always has the chance that a prince may come along and yank her out of her lowly environment. In these times, to be sure, the princes of real life go looking for their gals not in lowly environments, but in Palm Beach, Southampton, and the financial ratings, but that in no way impairs the old motif.

CAN'T BE GIGILO

The plot is sometimes varied to make the fellow the beneficiary of the princess, but when this change is worked he must be a fellow who beefs a lot about accepting the bounties of the princess, and you have to figure out a way to make him suddenly self-sustaining as he will not wind up in the opinion of the readers or the audience as just a gigilo. On the whole, the original plot is much easier work, which is probably what the original author thought or he would not have written it that way.

We do not know the original author's name, and doubtless someone has discovered by this time that he stole the story from someone else, anyway. But whoever he was, we think he ought to have a monument. If he had not written Cinderella, the whole world would have missed a lot of entertainment and millions of authors would have starved to death.

BOOM DOHERTY AS COMMANDER OF LEGION

By JAMES F. McENANEY

"We want Doherty, we want Doherty."

This will be the battle-cry of the several score of New England delegates and thousands of Legionnaires attending the 19th annual convention of the American Legion in Madison Square Garden, beginning one week from today.

And Doherty is no other than Daniel J. Doherty, 43, a Woburn attorney, assistant district attorney of Middlesex County, past state commander of the American Legion and present senior vice-commander of the national department of the American Legion.

Legionnaire Doherty is a candidate for national commander of the legion—and from nation-wide reports the Woburn lawyer looms as the possible winner in a field of four.

FIRST N. E. CANDIDATE

The candidacy of Doherty marks the first time in the legion's history that a New Englander has been definitely placed in the commandership race.

Doherty, life-long resident of Woburn, is married and lives in Bedford street.

Following his graduation from Woburn high school in 1912, Doherty began to climb the ladder to fame.

At the age of 22, he was elected to the Woburn board of aldermen.

In 1917, he laid aside his political ambitions temporarily and enlisted in the Navy, where he served until February, 1919.

Returning to Woburn, Doherty regained his political complex once again became active in city affairs.

"Danny" as he is known to the citizenry of Woburn, entered Suffolk Law School. In 1922 he was graduated from that institution with cum laude honors and was admitted to the bar a few months later.

RISE RAPID

Becoming a charter member of the George A. Campbell Post in Woburn, Doherty was chosen post commander. His rise in veteran circles began from that point on. He was elected secretary, judge advocate, senior vice commander and county commander of Middlesex County Council.

At the Holyoke convention in 1933, Doherty was elected state commander after serving two terms as vice commander.

At the national convention in Miami in 1934, Doherty was elected national vice-commander, and at Cleveland last year was elevated to senior vice-commander.

In April, 1935, District Attorney Warren A. Bishop appointed Doherty assistant district attorney.

Immediately following the New Bedford convention a few weeks ago, Doherty departed on a Western tour, for the purpose of gaining the confidence and assurance of votes from delegates from that section of the country.

The "Doherty for National Commaander" committee will set up headquarters on the 10th floor of the Hotel Pennsylvania next Sunday.

First of Legion's 500,000 Reach N. Y.

New York, Sept. 13 (INS)—Vanguard of the American Legion began arriving in New York City today for the annual convention which opens next Monday.

The bulk of the 500,000, however, is not expected until after the middle of the next week.

Despite their early arrival, the former service men were able to swing into the "convention spirit" as practically all of the city's hotels and restaurants already have been decorated with "welcome" signs.

Principal topic of discussion with early arriving legionnaires was selection of national commander.

With at least five strong candidates in the field to take over the post of Harry W. Colmery, a struggle of no little importance is expected.

"The "political talk" around headquarters indicated that at present Ray Kelly, prominent Detroit Corporation counsel, is the leading candidate, with Dan Doherty of Woburn, Mass., a former national vice-commander, his strongest rival.

Other reputedly strong candidates are Vincent A. Carroll of Philadelphia, Stephen Chadwick of Seattle and Milo Warner of Toledo.

Nurses, doctors and ambulance attendants were aboard the chartered ship. The primate of Ireland, Cardinal McRory, and five other members of the Irish hierarchy headed the pilgrimage.

Copeland Asks Black Ouster For Klan Link

Special to Boston Evening American

New York, Sept. 13—When shown a published newspaper article early today, to the effect that Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court Hugo Lafayette Black has long been a life member of the Ku Klux Klan under sacred oath to uphold the religious and racial prejudices of that organization United States Senator Royal S. Copeland issued a sharp statement on the matter.

The Senator called on the United States Supreme Court and the United States Senate to find some way to prevent the new associate justice from sitting as a member of the court.

When President Roosevelt recently nominated the then U. S. Senator Black to the U. S. Supreme Court bench after the retirement of Associate Justice Vandevanter and his name came up for confirmation in the Senate, Copeland waged a bitter fight against Black.

He charged the latter with klan membership and klan prejudices against large groups of Americans which would unfit him for a membership in the Supreme Court.

DENIALS MADE

Denias were made in behalf of Senator Black that he is a klansman, but the administration backing of him was so strong that the group of Senators opposing him was quickly beaten down and the President's choice was confirmed.

He has since taken the oath of office as an associate justice, and is now in Europe. He is scheduled to take his place on the highest bench in the country unless this latest development can be made sufficiently effective to force his retirement.

Today's definite expose of Justice Black's klan membership in an article in the New York Times and other newspapers throughout the country, copyrighted by the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc., and the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, is to be backed up by the reproduction of documents, it is said.

The story is to the effect that Black became a member of the Ku Klux Klan, hooded brotherhood, in 1923, and there is a letter, entirely in Senator Black's handwriting, resigning from the klan under date of 1925, when he was first running for election to the United States Senate.

It is charged that the document was never used as an actual resignation but was merely held in the Klan for the benefit of Senator Black in case the Klan came up against him.

With the first installment of the expose of Black and the klan was published the first piece of documentary evidence.

This the reproduction of the unused resignation of 1925 written on the stationary of the realm of Alabama Ku Klux Klan. It is addressed to J. W. Hamilton, a leading Klansman of Birmingham, Ala., and reads as follows:

"July 9, 1925.

"Dear Sir and Klansmen:

"Beg to tender you herewith my resignation as a member of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, effective from this date on.

"Yours I. T. S. U. B.

"Hugo L. Black."

Then, it is charged, in the Birmingham, Ala., headquarters of the Ku Klux Klan, on Sept. 2, 1926, when it was felt the Klan issue could no longer be harmful to him, Justice Black was made a life member of the hooded order and was presented with a golden card of klan life membership.

THANKED KLAN AID

It is stated that at this meeting Black gave thanks for the support of the klan in the senatorial election and pledged life loyalty to the klan and the klan principles and prejudices. He is quoted as saying at that meeting:

"I realize that I was elected by men who believe in the principles which I have sought to advocate and which are the principles of this organization."

Senator Copeland said:

"I think this is going to awaken the American public to a realization of what has been done in the nomination and confirmation of Justice Black.

"If the Black appointment had not been railroaded through the Senate there might have been time to develop this proof against Senator Black and the opposition to him might have grown sufficiently strong to prevent confirmation.

"In the brief Senate debates the accusation was made that he was a Klansman. The charges were made but were shut off by administration forces.

"The question the U. S. Senate and the U. S. Supreme Court should now decide is whether a man who would allow his own senatorial colleagues to be deceived as to where he stood and a man who has taken secret oath against large groups of Americans, is the kind of man who can be depended upon to give absolute justice to all Americans regardless of race or religion.

"The only kind of man the American people can afford to have on that bench is a man who will give exact justice to all and who is bound by no secret oath against certain parts of the American citizenry.

"I feel that in view of these disclosures the Supreme Court and the Senate should find some way, despite the senatorial confirmation, to keep this man from wearing the black robe of justice by day and the shameful white robe of the Klan in the dark of the night."

When Black's name was up for confirmation, an effort was made on the floor of the Senate to prevent confirmation and to send the nomination back to the Senate judiciary committee by recommitment. This move was defeated, however, and the following senators voted against confirmation:

Senator Rush D. Holt (D) of West Virginia said at his home in Weston, W. Va., today:

"If the purported facts had been presented to the United States Senate there might have been a different verdict on the confirmation.

"If there is any place tolerance should exist and be practiced it is on the Supreme Court, a body that must pass on the civil and religious liberties of all classes, creeds and races."

Copeland Puts Klan Stigma on Mayoral Foe

New York, Sept. 13 (AP)—United States Senator Royal S. Copeland, Tammany candidate for nomination as mayor of New York, today brought the name of Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black into the mayoralty campaign and charged that Judge Jeremiah T. Mahoney, his opponent for the Democratic nomination, "is tarred with the same stick of the Ku Klux Klan."

Copeland charged Mahoney, a "100 per cent New Dealer," would have "sustained the President even to the extent of placing a Ku Klux Klansman on the Supreme Court bench."

"That's an indictment of Mr. Mahoney to which there is no answer," Copeland continued. "His silence has given consent to the emasculation of the court and placing upon the court a Klansman, who wears a black robe by day and a white robe of the Klan by night."

Actress Killed In Car Crash

Los Angeles, Sept. 13 (AP)—Lynne Rodney, young actress and stand-in for Grace Moore, is dead here today. She was killed when her automobile crashed into a tree.

In private life Miss Rodney was Mrs. Gibson Williams Jr. She was the wife of the artist and sculptor known in the movies as Bixie Windham.

Black's confirmation.

Senator Walsh, who was on a naval inspection tour when the confirmation vote was taken in the Senate, explained today why he had not flatly refused to approve the confirmation.

TELLS OF TELEGRAMS

"Shortly before I went on the naval inspection tour I was shown telegrams from Catholics and Jews in Alabama which registered approval for Black and said nothing about Ku Klux Klan or made any charges of intolerance.

"These charges today make it imperative, however, that President Roosevelt remove him from the court."

Senator Walsh, speaking over the telephone from his home in Clinton, said he had wired his "doubts" to the Senate as to the qualifications of Senator Black for the appointment.

BRIDGES IN BLAST

Senator Bridges, speaking from Concord, N. H., said:

"No man should be in the Supreme Court with such charges leveled at him.

"I voted against Black's confirmation because I believe he hasn't the judicial temperament for the high office. There is nothing in his career that has ever indicated impartial fairness or tolerance, so necessary for the solemn duties of the United States Supreme Court.

"I am glad more than ever that I voted down his confirmation."

"PROOF," SAYS WHITE

Senator White, vacationing in Auburn, Me., said:

"This revelation is further proof that Senator Black doesn't belong in the United Sates Supreme Court.

"I think he should have been disqualified long before this and with these charges should be removed immediately."

Hard Carbon BAILS OUT -when JENNEY SOLVENIZED GOES IN

Don't let hard carbon stow away in your motor! Overloaded with carbon, your motor is sluggish, compression is weak, you waste gasoline.

Now it is a simple matter to defeat harmful carbon and have a permanently efficient motor.

The Solvenizing process in JENNEY dissolves carbon binder and softens the carbon deposits on valves, piston rings and piston head. This soft carbon is then blown out the exhaust. Result is that valves seat properly, rings seal tightly, you stop wasting gasoline—you get greater power, far more mileage.

Let JENNEY Solvenized show you what it can do for your car. Start using it today, and watch the steady improvement as hard carbon goes out and power and mileage go up.

Mary Pentecost and Jackson Turner Are Guests of Honor

By BETTY ALDEN

A PERAMBULATING HOUSE-PARTY is the latest invention of the younger North Shore socialites . . . Necessity is supposed to be the mother of invention, so as long as the week-end was a bit too chilly for a swimming party or a beach picnic, Lindsay Dexter devised a house-party on wheels as a way of entertaining his friends Saturday evening . . . His guests first gathered for dinner and to drink a few toasts to the guests of honor, Mary Pentecost and Jackson Turner, who are to be married on the 24th of September . . .

ELLEN MOSELEY

After dinner they all piled into a shiny new house trailer which had been rented for the evening . . . and, towed by a black coupe, they trundled about the countryside looking like a fashionable version of the family of "The Old Lady Who Lived in a Shoe" for there must have been twenty, all in formal evening togs, standing or sitting on the seats or floor of the trailer . . . They ultimately arrived at the Casino in Magnolia, where they all piled out again to dance the rest of the evening away . . .

Host Dexter, who can always be depended upon for sartorial innovations, as well as new ideas for parties, wore a French blue linen tuxedo jacket in place of the conventional black . . . He and Dick Pentecost, and several other men in the party, had large bulges in their jacket pockets where they carried candid cameras . . . so, needless to say, between each dance the conversation at their stag table was punctuated with innumerable snaps and clicks . . .

Mary, the bride-to-be, and her two sisters, Catherine and Cornelia Pentecost, were attractive enough subjects to please the most fastidious photographer . . . Mary in a novel printed dress graciously acknowledging the best wishes of her friends . . . Cornelia in a wine red velvet gown with a lacy black veil caught to the top of her head with little wine velvet bows and trailing down to her shoulders in back . . . and Catherine wearing a similar veil fastened with white gardenias in her hair, with her full skirted gown of black chiffon . . .

Elsie Brewer in a floaty chiffon gown of pale gray with panels of cherry red and a silver fox cape, was another in the party and Sylvia Peters of Chicago had no lack of partners among the North Shore friends of her host . . . Mr. and Mrs. John Goodrich, the Van Voorhis boys and Connie Turner, sister of the bridegroom-to-be, were all among the merrymakers who piled out of the trailer to dance, and back in again for the homeward journey at the close of the evening . . .

Anne Clark to Be Bridesmaid

JOHN ROOSEVELT AND ANNE CLARK, who spend fifteen minutes out of every hour these days assuring people that they are "just friends," also feted a soon-to-be-married couple over the week-end . . . Friday evening at the Casino they drank their toasts to Barbara Brewer and Charles Sturges who will become Mr. and Mrs. this coming Friday . . . Anne is to be one of Barbara's bridesmaids so the ever watchful news photographers who have been trying so hard to get a picture of John and Anne together the last few days, will have to be on their toes until after the wedding . . .

Anne wore a new fall evening gown of black velvet with a low boat shaped neckline edged with tiny clusters of pearls resembling bunches of grapes . . . John Drayton, John's traveling companion in Europe this summer, was also in the party, and his girl wore a velvet dress very similar to Anne's, except that it was trimmed with white lace at the neck and sleeves . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Cochrane, who have just returned from their honeymoon, were welcomed back to the shore by about a dozen friends at a party at the Casino Saturday evening . . . The bride, who was Ethel Grew, wore a full skirted gown of ivory taffeta with a short bolero and a fine silver necklace with a diamond pendant . . . Ellen Moseley, one of the debs of the new season, was in their party, and looked like a deb at her own coming out party in a dream of a gown of white [illegible] with innumerable narrow bands of white satin appliqued on the skirt and bodice . . .

Farewell Party at the Casino

MARY HASTINGS, who returned to these shores from Europe just last week, wore orchids on her black chiffon street dress as she danced and drank champagne in a party with the Wallie Pierces . . . as a concession to the drizzly night Mrs. Pierce wore a modish fall suit of burgundy wool with a grey Persian lamb collar and a burgundy poke bonnet type hat . . .

Mrs. F. Wadsworth Busk has a memento of the occasion in the form of a crayon portrait of herself, made by the artist at the Casino while other members of her party stood around and tried to tease her for striking a serious pose when she is ordinarily so very animated and gay . . . She and Mr. Busk were in a large party with the Thomas Beales, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Bundy, and Mr. and Mrs. William Febiger . . .

Most of the people dancing did not realize that it was the final night of the season at the Casino until Ruby Newman and his musicians struck up Auld Lang Syne . . . and everyone clapped and called for a few more encores to bid a tuneful farewell to another North Shore season . . .

From all parts of the city and state will come delegates. Among them are Mrs. Joseph Sullivan, Marguerite Maguire, Mary Colwell and Frances Nolan, representatives of Boston Academy of Notre Dame and Mary Caulfield, Eleanor Campbell and Grace Kelly, members of the Roxbury Notre Dame alumnae group.

Other Notre Dame graduates taking part in arranging the program are Anna Lang, Clementine McDonald and Margaret Murray, members of Fitton High School alumnae, and Julia Fallon and Mary Leonard, who will represent St. Gregory's School of Dorchester at the executive session. St. Augustine's school in South Boston is sending Irena Powers and Margaret McCann as its delegates.

Hope Avtgis Is Bride

One of the prettiest weddings of the season took place yesterday afternoon in the Greek Orthodox church, Watertown, when Hope Avtgis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Avtgis of Pleasant street, became the bride of James Tragakis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Christie Tragakis of Westland road, Watertown.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. S. Righellis, pastor of the Greek Orthodox church of Watertown, assisted by the Rev. Elthimio of Boston. The bride wore brocaded white satin with a coronation crown and veil, and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and white roses.

The maid of honor was Miss Helen Avtgis, sister of the bride, and she wore a dress of candlelight brocade, gold covered, and carried a bouquet of mixed flowers. The ring bearer was Alexander Avtgis, brother of the bride, and the flower girl was Mary Tragakis, sister of the bridegroom.

The bridesmaids were Alice Mallis, Ann Varkis, who wore dresses of aquamarine, Mary Varkis and Ann Kinteris, who wore yellow chiffon over satin, and Katherine Varkis and Mary Varkis, who wore peach chiffon over satin.

The best man was Peter Dulos. After the wedding ceremony more than 500 guests adjourned to Pinehurst Park, Billerica, where a caterer's supper was served.

'Pick Up' Girls Bargain For Trouble—And They Usually Get It

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

In old-fashioned country stores—the kind that used to smell of mackerel barrels, kerosene and overall dye—one used to see a sign sometimes: "Take one: welcome."

This broad-gauge invitation usually appeared on the old pickle barrel about this time of the year, when the grocer was glad to get rid of his old stock before he got in his fall supply of the sour-green delicacy.

The free pickle barrels disappeared when women customers began to know more about germs and insisted that the cross-roads stores be cleaned, and goods which had begun to "go off" be thrown out, instead of being offered to youthful patrons.

Whenever I get a letter from a troubled girl lamenting a "pick-up" acquaintance, with whom she has had a few dates more or less disastrous to herself, the picture of the cross-roads store comes back and the old-fashioned way of getting rid of damaged goods.

A GRAVE DANGER

These "pick-up" friends are very good at decamping without leaving an address, or any means by which they can be traced when most needed. Girls have a way of expecting sympathy because they have been shown no CONSIDERATION by these irresponsible acquaintances.

For all the girl knows, the man who smiles at her on the street corner or in a bus may be married, the father of a family, and only out looking for an adventure. Or he may be one of those human sharks sounding out a girl to discover the extent of her pitiful savings.

There is a particularly rapacious breed of swindlers who prey on girls who have a little money, which always looks good to them. Sometimes the girl has no money, and the man persuades her to marry him and insure her life for his benefit.

In the last few weeks, two of these men have been executed for murdering girls for their insurance. Testimony showed they had contracted multiple marriages all over the country.

"But I can take care of myself" some of you girls will write me, "and life is so dull and stupid, and I'm so lonesome that I have to make acquaintances this way."

All I can say is, you're taking your chances when you allow men about whom you know nothing to become acquainted with you, and then make dates with them.

A girl may even write me that "Aunt Hannah and Uncle Jabez met each other in just such circumstances, and they were married and lived happily ever after."

My answer is that it was a simpler world 50 or 60 years ago than it is now, and marrying working girls for their savings or insurance was not the industry then that it has become today.

Women are the bargaining sex, and every "nice girl" (and by that I mean the type who are normal) wants to marry, have children and her own home.

But she should be wise enough to know, when she "picks up" an absolute stranger, that such a man feels no responsibility toward her whatever.

She may escape harm, but it is just as likely that the game is stacked against her from the start.

FAILED TO CALL HER

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

The other day a girl friend asked me to go on a "blind date," meaning her friend had a boy friend he wanted to go with me. I went and had a thoroughly good time.

The boy said he thought I was NICE, and that I made him feel as if he'd known me a long time. I liked him, too.

He promised to call me up next day, but did not do so. Later he called up saying he was sorry, but that he had been very busy in the office and had to work overtime.

Then he said he'd call next day, but if he didn't call before a certain time, it was because he had to go on a business trip with his boss.

That's the last I heard from him.

Do you suppose he really went out of town, or what could be the matter with him? He didn't expect to stay away indefinitely.

I'm terribly blue. SUE.

MY DEAR SUE:

You may have shown too plainly that this boy made a deep impression on you, and that may have frightened him away.

Some of them are very timid and although they may use this line about knowing you a long time, etc., sometimes they're apt to become scared out of their wits if a girl tunes in with the same accompaniment.

If you see or hear from him again, just try being pleasantly casual.

And do not take him too seriously.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

WANTS TO KISS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm very much in love with a girl whom I see frequently. We've been going together for a long time.

Every time I try to kiss her, she refuses.

P. D. Q.

DEAR SON:

I think, if the recording angel is looking down, he may forgive you for a good-night kiss.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Bridge

Trump Conservation

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

There is one type of mistake at Bridge which can be described only by the word "naive."

I refer to the occasions when declarer obviously says to himself: "I'll draw just one trump and then stop."

This may be a very good policy when the declarer has rigid control of the hand, but it is not so good when applied to a hand such as the following:

South, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

North:
♠ A 10 6 5
♡ J 9 8 3
♢ Q 7 4 2
♣ Q

West:
♠ K 9 8 3 2
♡ A 4
♢ 10 9
♣ K 10 6 3

East:
♠ Q 7 4
♢ K J 8 3
♣ J 8 4 2

♠ J
♡ K Q 10 7 2
♢ A 6 5
♣ A 9 7 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	2 ♡	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opened the ten of diamonds which declarer allowed to ride to his own Ace. A survey of losing tricks must have revealed that it would be necessary to ruff declarer's three losing clubs in dummy.

Declarer properly "reasoned" that only three of dummy's trumps would be required for this process and that, therefore, he could well afford to draw one round. If that was his thought, it was extremely ingenuous. On the lead of the heart King, West hopped right up with his Ace, and cannily returned his remaining trump.

From that time on, declarer found himself struggling against insuperable obstacles. He could not establish a diamond trick, nor a spade outside of the Ace and, though he ruffed two clubs in dummy, was eventually forced to concede one club and two diamonds, in addition to the heart Ace.

It would be difficult to find a more easily played hand than this one, but I have noticed that it is these very hands that cause grief. Declarer was probably obsessed with the idea that West's opening diamond lead indicated that he was seeking diamond ruffs.

But why should that have affected the play? Declarer could well afford to concede two diamond tricks, and certainly should not have cared whether they were lost naturally or to ruffs.

The obvious crux of the hand was not to be left with losing clubs, hence a straight cross-ruff of clubs and spades was clearly indicated.

Bath Treatment Reduces in Spots

Her waist should present a lovely in-curve, the concave arc to emphasize through contrast her rounded, soft shoulders.

With everything draped to emphasize a slick line, and the Wally-sponsored corselet silhouette queen of the scene, there's only one answer to routing a thickened contour.

It's localized reducing!

A dieting regimen will assuredly skim off the curves where you most want them, isn't it so? Besides you can't afford to run the risk of enervation, of losing a bit of that precious vitality and sparkle which is frankly and openly the modern girl's lure!

* * *

Wouldn't you sit up electrified with eagerness if you knew of a certain, safe localized reducing treatment on an entirely new basis . . . a sort of "melting down" bath that used magic infra red rays to dispel INCHES?

To be able to do this and come out feeling coddled as a kitten on a cream-and-catnip regimen is a positive miracle!

Because it is not only a reducing but a health treatment, all in one, in which you are handled with a satin-and-down touch.

There is no tomfoolery about relieving your system of water, which returns inside of a day or two. Fatty cells are the objective of the infra red rays, and they're melted down and out of your system just where you want them to be melted. And nowhere else!

Many a girl has gone into deep despair about her hipline, which yields not to systematic starving. It is for just such cases that localized melting-off weight is the perfect solution.

It is said to be the only reducing method whereby weight is lost without injury to health or warping of the disposition! Prices are most moderate, particularly if it's one of these localized jobs that is your heart's desire.

* * *

You'd be surprised at the careful tending routine that goes into the whole reconditioning bath. There's a grand facial, soothing eye pads, you're wrapped in a scientifically heated blanket when infra red rays are put to work, and you come out feeling brisk and ready for fun!

And it's no wonder you'll feel like a new woman, because your system will have been cleansed and purged of toxic poisons.

If you wish to know which salon specializes in this localized reducing art, phone Arline Gould, LIberty [illegible], week days until five, or write her at the Boston American, inclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope.

A BRAND new and subtle way of scenting the body so that it emanates sweetness all the day long has been discovered by Arline Gould. She will tell about it in her Wednesday article.

Height Can't Be Controlled

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

HARDLY A DAY passes that I do not receive a letter from one of my young readers asking how to grow tall.

Boys, particularly, are anxious to attain what they regard as enviable height.

Quite as many girls are desirous of being tall, but they are usually more concerned about weight.

There is no doubt that many persons are unhappy over being short. Sometimes an overly sensitive soul develops an inferiority complex because of extreme shortness. Some resort to all sorts of measures to increase the height and naturally are disappointed if their efforts are unsuccessful.

Stature is controlled by nature. It is markedly influenced by heredity and, with present knowledge, is seldom changed by medication or other measures.

Of course, we can help nature somewhat and aid growth by the removal of all possible handicaps that serve to prevent development. But there is no medicine that will guarantee increased height.

If a child's parents are tall he is very likely to reach a good height by the time he matures. Occasionally the offspring of short parents reaches a good height, perhaps because some of their ancestors were tall. For this reason it is difficult to determine in advance whether a youngster will be tall or short. The children of this generation are quite generally taller than their parents. This may be because they have been more scientifically fed and have been given the advantages of systematic and supervised exercises.

Let me point out that if you are desirous of being tall and wish to appear taller than you really are, it is necessary to improve your posture.

'SELF-MADE GIRL' -:- By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

LYNN PERRY, the best-dressed business girl in town, asks herself: "What's the matter with you? Why aren't you really happy? You've worked for it — you've got it—why don't you want it, now you've got it?"

Photograph Posed By Miss Ann Culkin of the Boston Evening American Circulation Department

The Story of Lynn Perry Who Lived for Riches and Independence

CHAPTER 1

The worst of being self-made, and a success, Lynn Perry thought in her lonely moments, which came oftener than she cared to admit, was that you couldn't talk about it.

Men boasted about that sort of thing, of course, but men were different.

A man could rise from any sort of background, work himself through college, and actually boast about it.

But with a girl it was different. It had to be kept a secret. You had to pretend you were born with the gold spoon in your mouth.

You had to pretend you came by everything naturally instead of working and slaving and driving yourself.

Pretend . . . Lynn was getting sick of it. Sick of herself. Lynn Perry, the best-dressed business girl in town. Mink coat in the closet. Always the latest and best on her back.

Sheerest of cobweb silk making her slim ankles look slimmer. A manicure and a facial and a shampoo and finger wave every week. Her own luxurious little apartment. Her own maid. And at least one eligible bachelor who wanted to marry her.

What's the matter with you? she asked herself. Why aren't you happy? You've worked for it—you've got it—why don't you want it, now you've got it?

A SAD WORLD

Were other people like that? Did they ache to—to tell all? Was that why criminals went back to the scene of the crime? Was that why so few girls ever really got anywhere?

Because they just couldn't help talking about things they shouldn't? Because they didn't have the patience to wait?

And then she'd think of her life, as it might have been—and of her sisters, Claudine and Blanche. Claudine, faded and stooped with overwork and child-bearing, and Blanche who had never had love or romance.

No! No! She couldn't bear that. This was better. Anything was better.

Over and over, in her mind, she went over her early life.

She couldn't say, "Look, I've come a long way, haven't I?"—but she could think it, and she did.

She was the youngest, the last of five children—Claudine and Blanche and Bert and Lawrence—and then 12 years later, herself. Linda, they called her. She changed it to Lynn later.

She remembered her father, oldish and lame, going to work when other men were coming home. He was night watchman in the mill where the boys worked.

She remembered her mother's dark eyes and thin white hands, and her voice, querulous and sweet. And, most vividly, her grandmother, who ruled the house, because the mother was an invalid.

She remembered the small, comfortable frame house, where they lived at the edge of the town. At least, they thought it was comfortable then.

It was just a tiny town, in the pleasant wooded country some 50 miles from Philadelphia.

All the children from the town went to the school. There were no class distinctions. Senator Scott's granddaughter, Constance, played with the Harrisons' chauffeur's girl, Thelma, and Dr. Wagner's little daughter, Ruth, and Linda played with them all.

THEY HAD FUN

The Scotts always fascinated her. She was always going there, instead of coming home after school. She'd come home and tell about Mrs. Scott's tea-gowns and Mr. Scott's beautiful russet boots and pale tan riding breeches, and the tall, frosted glass with mint sticking out of it, that old Senator Scott always had in his hand.

Everyone looked up to the Scotts, of course, but they gossiped about them, too. Hard drinking, hard riding, fast living . . .

But they had fun. They knew how to live! And nobody else in the town did.

One night Blanche was home from the hospital, where she worked. They were all there but Claudine. They sat around the table, under the hanging lamp with its green glass shade with the beaded fringe, their plates pushed back, coffee cups empty.

Blanche was happy and excited, because she was assured of a permanent position. She was about 20 then, slim and sparkling and eager, her beautiful black hair wound in braids around her well-shaped head, her white skin lightly touched with color.

"And in another year," she said, "I'll be in surgery, and then I won't rest until I'm head of it!"

Bert, always the cynic, lifted his dark head from his hands.

"And then what?" he asked.

DIE ON THE SHELF?

Bert got up. "Yeh," he said. "You would. You'll work all your life. You and Claudine and Lawrie and I. Like pa. Work and sweat and then get put on the shelf and die. And you don't have to do it, either, you've got looks.

"Like Claudine had, and Linda here is going to have. And you can bet SHE won't kill herself working, not that one!"

"What?" Blanche said. "What?"

"You can't insult them," he said, "they're insulting themselves just as we all are. Wage slaves, satisfied to—"

Linda didn't want to hear about wage slaves, she wanted to hear some more about herself. She piped in her 7-year-old treble. "And what did you say I'm going to be, Bert? What did you say I was going to be when I grow up?"

She was so small and eager he didn't have the heart to disappoint her. He laughed, and then the others smiled, and the tension was broken. "Well, what ARE you going to be, Linda?"

A BORN QUEEN

"Oh," she said, "I'm going to be a queen!"

When they laughed, she was terribly hurt and went and hid in the shadow of grandma's skirts.

"Baby," Blanche said, laughing, "you can't be a queen! You've got to be born a queen."

"I don't care," she cried, "I'm going to be one anyway!"

Bert was the first to stop laughing. He turned back to Blanche, in her neat blue serge suit with the white collar and cuffs. He said, "Did you hear that? What did I tell you? She knows what she wants already, and it isn't to work for a living. She isn't like the rest of us—she's smart!"

"Bert!" their mother cried sharply, "Bert, how can you SAY such things?"

And Linda—who was Lynn now—looked from one face to the other and remembered it all afterward, every word.

At least, she'd always had ambition. Bert was right about saying she knew what she wanted. And looks.

Black hair and blue eyes, white skin, and red lips, like Snow White, the little princess in the fairy tale that was her favorite as a child. But looks aren't everything. There are millions of pretty girls.

It wasn't only her looks that did the trick . . . And if Bert thought it was going to come easy, he was WRONG!

Because she was the baby, and because they'd never had the things they could give her they all spoiled Linda.

"ONLY A CHILD"

Little hand-smocked gingham dresses, tucked voiles, hand-knit sweaters. Whatever the other girls had, Linda had, too.

If she protested that Linda wanted too much, the father interceded. "Oh, let her have it; She's only a child once!"

Train Girl to Keep House

FROM MONDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WMEX

THAT THREADBARE adage about sparing the rod should be altered to read: "Spare homemaking training and spoil the daughter."

My own early training is frequently remembered, when visiting in some home where the busy mother fairly implores her heedless child to "please set the table and help mother."

Usualy daughter flies out with her hi-li ball and Mother and I set the table.

Some wise Mothers have been drawing daughter into the household routine during the vacation days. We hear others protesting that the child "is only young once" and that responsibilities should come later.

But the young daughter quickly forms habits. Perhaps she leaves her room untidy and her new school dress in a heap on the floor, knowing that Mother will pick both up, even under protest!

MANY a youngster who balks at dishes or dusting will respond to the creative appeal of cookery. Nine times out of ten, if Mother is patient with the inexperienced worker, a young culinary artist will develop in the family.

Let the child watch the making of some simple dish like muffins, a plain cake, or a pudding, explaining each process carefully. Daughter can be the "apprentice," and when she asks to beat the eggs, or sift the flour, put her into an apron and don't be too distressed when she sloshes the mixture over herself, or the floor.

NEXT TIME, give her the recipe, help to assemble the ingredients and then (most important) stay out of the kitchen, remaining "on call" in another part of the house. This is the critical time when "bossing" will kill the young cook's interest.

Faced by the responsibility of mixing and preparing some dish, particularly if it is one of Daddy's favorites, the junior cook is very apt to do a good job.

If she falls down—as so many older cooks often do, try to offer criticism in a kindly way that will not hurt her feelings. Suggest tactfully, "Now next time, I think WE better have the oven a little bit lower," rather than bemoaning the waste in a scorched cake.

We suggest starting daughter on simple dishes. With a little guidance in the selection of what she learns to prepare, she will soon graduate to the preparation of a complete meal for the family.

Suppose we start daughter with a seasonable recipe such as the simple, yet delicious dessert given below. We feel that in the beginning of a culinary career recipes must necessarily be detailed and written in a clearer manner than for the experienced cook.

PEACH BETTY

Light the oven and adjust for "moderately hot," or set the regulator for 375 degrees Fahrenheit. Butter the covered casserole dish to be used.

2 cups peaches, sliced
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon

Canned or fresh peaches may be used. Mix peaches, lemon juice, cinnamon and sugar together. Put a layer of peaches in the bottom of the buttered casserole.

⅓ cup butter
2½ cups bread, cut in cubes

Melt the butter in a saucepan large enough to hold bread cubes. When butter is melted add the bread cubes and mix well with butter. Put a layer of the bread cubes over the peaches. Then add another layer of peaches and one of bread cubes, continuing until all are used—having a layer of cubes on top.

¼ cup peach juice

Use ¼ cup hot water if there is no peach juice. If using canned peaches, there will be plenty of juice. Pour water or juice over all. Cover casserole and place in the oven. Bake about 35 or 40 minutes. Remove cover for last 15 minutes to brown pudding.

'Your Figure, Madame!'

SLIMMING NEEDS ARE SHOWN

By IDA JEAN KAIN

SLIMMING is getting to be an art, and remodeling your figure takes forethought. No longer do you step from the scales and blithely announce.

"Well, I've got to lose ten pounds."

While measurements vary with structure, symmetry demands for all figures the same proportionate difference between the bust and waistline and the bust and hipline. With a seven to nine inch difference between the bust and waist, and with hips that do not exceed the bust by more than two inches—you have symmetry. But when the perfect thirty-six bust is mismatched with a thirty-one inch waistline and size forty-two hips, the silhouette resembles a Bartlett pear.

The tape measure is the most infallible guide to your weight loss.

First measurement, the chest: Nature gave you a wide, medium or small frame, and there is nothing you can do about that. Your chest structure is the key to symmetry in your other measurements. Pass the tape around the back and bring it together above the bust. Before measuring, take a deep breath and exhale.

Second measurement, the bust: Move the tape down from the chest and across the center of the breasts. In the good figure this measurement may exceed the chest by one inch to two and one-half inches. The curve of the bust differs greatly in different structures, but the loveliest bust contour is about two inches larger than the chest.

Third measurement, the waist: To find your waistline, place hands on hips washerwoman fashion and place the tape where the thumb and forefinger encircle the waist. Don't squeeze with the tape!

Fourth Measurement, the hips: To get the true hipline, the buttocks must be included. Measure at the largest part, keeping the tape even all the way around.

The bust, waist and hips are the three pivotal measurements in the determination of symmetry. Given weight within 10 per cent of normal and measurements that conform to these proportions, your figure cannot be far from perfect.

To complete the record, you may like to measure thigh, calf and ankle. In measuring the thigh, place the tape slightly above the center of the upper leg. This measurement will vary from 19 inches, for the small girl, to 22 inches for the large girl.

The calf should be measured while standing, the ankle while sitting. Measure the calf at the fleshy part and the ankle at the bony part. The calf measurement is loveliest at 12½ inches to 13½ inches, and the ankle may vary from 7½ inches for five feet of height to 8¼ inches for five feet eight inches.

Married Comrades

By Adele Garrison

CHAPTER 404

AS Lillian's warmly interested and affectionate eyes met mine, her voice asked me to "dish the dope" on my journey.

I felt a wave of distaste for my errand sweep over me, a feeling amounting to self-loathing for the deceit which Marion's appeal was compelling me to practice upon her.

"It's very simple," I told her, forcing a smile to my lips. "I told you that I wanted to snatch this respite given me by my uncle's arrival two days later than we thought, and go into the city."

"I imagine the Dicky-bird had other people in view besides the neighbors," Lillian said sagely. "The not-so-innocent-bystanders upon the hilltop for instance. They would be much interested in your journey if they knew of it."

"But they won't," I rejoined. "I am going to get away before daylight if I shatter every alarm clock in the place."

"Of course, you will," she said soothingly. "Don't you want me to 'keep the bridge—or rather the alarm clock with thee?'"

"Do you mean wake yourself up, too?" I asked, horrified. "No, no."

"A thousand times no," she hummed airily. "Well! all right, I just thought I'd ask."

"Well! you're answered," I said firmly, but I found the next morning that my prohibition had been of no avail. It was but two minutes after my own clock had sounded that I heard her light rap upon my door.

"So you're up," she commented, as I opened the door. "All right, I'll just see that Katie's on the job and then I'll go back to bed, for I see fire in your eyes."

"You also see love and gratitude," I said catching her around the waist and kissing her warmly. "I ought to paddle you, but you simply defy all discipline."

"That's my specialty," she said with a grin as she turned away with an airy wave of the hand. "Goodby, and good luck, darling, and don't tire yourself too much."

Kate had a delicious hot breakfast waiting when I came into the dining room, but Dicky was nowhere to be seen.

"Have you heard Mr. Graham yet, Katie?" I said.

"He coom pretty soon," she said with a giggle. "You know, I kin always tell ven he get oop. He stamp around bathroom, cussing about towels or someting he no can find. Vell! eet cooms ten meenits to tree und I no hear heem so I send Jeem oop to get him oudt. He tell Jeem to tell you he hurrying like hell, und he be down in two jerks of leetle sheep's tail."

"I won't wait for him," I decided, "because he may be late and hurried. Please bring me my breakfast now."

But I had hardly finished my melon before Dicky lounged in, apparently unhurried, with "every hair in place."

"The top of the morning," he said as he sat down opposite me.

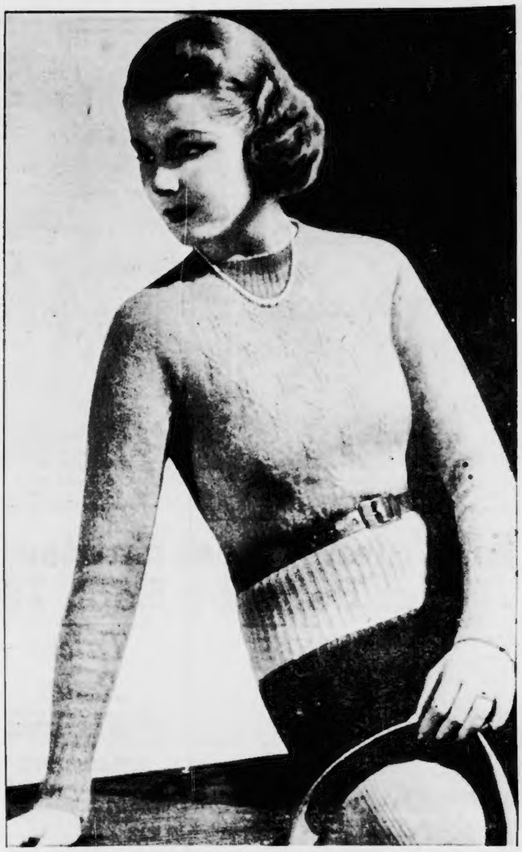
Sweaters Turn to Blouses



YOU'LL have any number of absolutely undetailed sweaters for your tweeds this fall . . . that goes without saying . . . but, perhaps for the first time, you'll find yourself coveting sweaters finely detailed as Parisian blouses. For that's the trend! What with millinery no longer the kind to be cobbled out of a felt hood, a pair of scissors and a stitch or two here and there . . . what with genuinely artistic detail all over frocks and suits . . . it's no wonder the sweater has chosen to turn into a blouse now and then, and become really high and mighty!

They're grand with the short-jacketed town suits. You'll find collars, pockets and inserts of trick stitches in the best models. Here is one of the nicest, with a certain classic air, but with a new, feminine stitchery design on the bodice. Tailored and elegant when unadorned, and dressy enough for luncheon when your best jewelry is added. Try it in luscious sport angora.

You may have knitting directions simply by writing to Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, Boston Evening American, and inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

GOOD MANNERS -:- By Mrs. Beeckman

TIME TO LEAVE

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

We are in doubt as to the correct answer to the following question. Should the young man say when it is time to leave after escorting the young lady home, or should she tell him when to go? K.

The young man should "sense" the proper time for him to leave, then should rise and say, "Good night, Mary. Thank you for such a happy evening," or something of this kind.

TRAVEL TIPS

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. When travelling on a train and you make friends with a young man and he invites you to luncheon, is it proper to go?
2. What would be a polite refusal?
3. If he didn't invite you, but happened to go at the same time you did and insisted upon paying your bill, would it be proper to let him?
4. What is the proper amount to tip the red cap after he has helped you to the train with your bags?
5. When out with a young man friend and he suggests eating and you don't care to, should you suggest that he have something to eat anyway? A READER.

1. A well-bred woman, a wise woman, does not "make friends" with a man fellow-traveler. If on a long trip, they are sitting in the diner, she may exchange pleasant remarks with him about the trip but a lady who is an accustomed traveler takes special care to keep these remarks casual, most casual, and impersonal, very impersonal.

And as cordial and friendly as his invitation to luncheon or dinner may be, she does not accept it, for this would place her under social obligations to a stranger, an obligation which a lady would not assume. It's just as much, too, a question of wisdom as it is of etiquette!

2. It is very easy to be gracious about refusing this invitation. The obvious way to do it is to say that you are dining later, that you are not hungry now. If the man has any sense of social relationship, he will at once "get the point." And if he doesn't get the point, it proves all the more that you did the right thing.

3. No. Say, in your most gracious way, "Thank you so much. It is very generous of you, but if you don't mind, I'd prefer to pay my own check."

4. Twenty-five cents is the usual fee, but it does depend somewhat on the amount of your luggage and on the distance the porter carries it. So if a smaller fee seems fair to you, you are the one to decide.

5. Yes, this is a generous point of view to take. You may say, for instance, "I'm not a bit hungry, Tom, but I'd be delighted to go with you while you have something to eat."

cover a new star from New England.

ONLY SIX DAYS

Now you have only six more days in which to send in your photographs and applications. They MUST be in by midnight of the 19th—that's next Sunday—so please send in your picture just as soon as you can.

It may mean that you will be given a screen test at the very least, and that in itself will be an interesting and valuable experience. And you mustn't be shy about it. Even if you don't think you're especially beautiful or handsome, remember that this has absolutely no relation to a beauty contest.

The M-G-M talent scouts are looking for screen possibilities—and that involves so many different requisites which are far more important than beauty. Leave your looks to the makeup experts, if necessary. But if you ARE beautiful or handsome, that means that your face will be a little easier for the makeup men to work on.

Those of you who sincerely desire to become an actor or actress will find that, after all, the road to success needn't be such a long, heart-breaking road.

If the talent scouts believe you have promise, if you are one of the many young people who will be given screen tests here in Boston, and if your screen test comes out well—then you may be the one to be finally selected as the potential star.

WONDER TRIP

You will be given a wonder trip to Hollywood, where you will spend a full month working in a picture at M-G-M. You will receive a salary of $75 a week. Aside from that, all your expenses will be paid—and you'll live in the coveted lap of luxury. You'll have a thrilling flight from here to Hollywood on a huge American Airlines Flagship. (I'm going along, too, to keep you company.) You will be given every opportunity at the studio to make good, to remain in Hollywood, to become a star.

When it comes to sending in your application, if you would like to submit more information about yourself and your background than you find room for on the application blank, send in the added information on a separate piece of paper and attach it to your photograph.

FINAL TESTS SEPT. 26

It may be that you are away at school and are wondering how you would be able to get away for a screen test, if you should be chosen for one. But remember that the final tests will be taken in Boston on Sunday, the 26th, so you would probably be able to be here for that day. And it would not take up a great deal of your time.

We must remind you again that the Talent Quest comes to a close NEXT Sunday, the 19th.

Between then and the 26th, the talent scouts will be giving innumerable personal interviews. After the 26th, they will be judging the individual screen tests.

And on October 4th, some one of you will leave for Hollywood—and, we hope—for stardom.

Talent Rules

The Boston American-M-G-M-Loew's Screen Talent Quest will be conducted under the following rules and stipulations:

1—Girls and men must be between the ages of 17 and 26.

2—The Quest is open to all residents of New England between these ages EXCEPT employes or members of the family of an employe of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Loew's Theaters, the Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

3—Girls or men who have had screen credit in any nationally distributed motion picture will not be eligible.

4—Girls or men who have had professional stage experience WILL be permitted to enroll, however.

5—A photograph of the entrant must accompany each application.

6—Photographs submitted in the campaign will not be returned UNLESS full postage is enclosed and a request made for their return.

7—All contestants selected for a screen and voice test must sign a special Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer release statement setting forth their understanding of the rules of the campaign.

8—The Talent Quest ends Sunday, September 19, 1937. All applications and photographs must be placed in the mail or delivered personally to the newspapers before midnight, September 19.

9—Entries bearing a postmark of later than midnight of the official closing date will not be considered.

10—Judging of all photographs and all entrants will rest solely in the hands of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer screen-testing staff.

Screen Tester Arrives For N. E. Talent Ques

C. Edward Carrier, the famous Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer director, arrived in Boston today to supervise the voice and screen tests which will be made of talented girls and young men in connection with the New England Talent Quest.

Carrier has traveled all over the world on assignments from M-G-M, and he has directed screen tests of many young "unknowns" who have become important players in Hollywood.

NOT ALL BEAUTY

Now he is in Boston to discover a new star. And certainly no one could be better qualified than Mr. Carrier to speak of the requisites of a successful screen career.

"So many people," he said, "are of the erroneous mind that beauty is the potent influence for a screen career, that I am impelled to discount this idea now and forever.

"Let me explain just what is necessary for any boy or girl to break into the movies.

"First of all, one must possess personality, coupled with talent and intelligence. The ability to act is very helpful, of course.

"Personality does not necessarily mean beauty. I know many established screen stars, not especially beautiful, yet whose poise, dignity, intelligence and acting ability make them extremely attractive on the screen. This is true in many instances, such as in the case of Joan Crawford, Greta Garbo, Wallace Beery, Katherine Hepburn and for others.

C. EDWARD CARRIER

"This situation is accounted by the fact that frequently one's appearance on the screen is far different than in real life, the result of that soulless, cold, one-eyed monster—the camera, which we cannot overlook.

"I have known the camera to take a vivacious personality in real life and strip it bare as an oak in mid-winter; and then again I have seen it catch that deep alluring personality and flaunt it to the world.

CHECK PERSONALITY

"My advice to all apilcants is to first of all take a brief inventory of yourself. Don't let the absence of physical beauty mar your endeavor to seek a screen career, providing, of course, you possess intelligence, average good looks and the ability to act. The camera, make-up and dress will do wonders for you.

"In taking stock of your personality you must find out whether you are of the magnetic and attractive type. Perhaps it may register you as the exotic and alluring, the beautiful and glamorous, the dignified and stately or the quaint and piquant type. All these types you have witnessed on the screen. Any of them may open the door of fame and fortune to you, not overlooking, of course, your ability to act.

"And last of all, and by all means quite important," concludes Mr. Carrier, "be your natural self. It will serve as your greatest asset and influence in your ambitions."

CRASH HURTS 7, 3 SERIOUSLY

Worcester, Sept. 13 — Seven persons were injured, three of them seriously, in a head-on collision on the Boston Post road near here today.

Four passengers, including the driver Walter LeGary, 35, of Prospect street, Spencer, were hurled to the concrete.

Seriously injured were:

Victoria M. LeGary, 35, fractured skull and internal injuries.

Mrs. Delima LeGary, 72, fractured skull and internal injuries.

All three were rushed to Memorial Hospital, Worcester, where their names were placed on the danger list.

Others injured, all riding in the other car, were:

Clock Turns Tables on Small Boy

When a small boy takes an alarm clock apart, it's nothing to write home about, but when an alarm clock starts to take a small boy apart—that's news.

And when another alarm clock compels two comely young nurses to reveal their unmentionables (don't get excited—the stuff was in a valise) it's about time someone recognized the humble timepiece as a potent factor in our social organization.

The first Great Alarm Clock Rebellion occurred when 10-year-old John L. Buckley, of Letterfine street, Roxbury, took the case off one in his home. He was treated at City hospital for cuts and bruises on the hands and face caused when the main spring snapped and showered him with sharp pieces.

His mishap was followed shortly by the second awakening of the Clock Tribe in the Massachusetts avenue "El" station, where the two nurses were waiting for a trolley car to take them back to Massachusetts Memorial hospital after a holiday.

Passengers and nurses alike were startled by a muffled ringing from the valise at the girls' feet. Hurriedly, they opened it, and blushingly disclosed reams of flimsies. They had set the clock to wake them up in time for the return trip.

And the lingerie spilled and spilled, while the clock rang and rang—

Blonde Winner In Beauty Contest

Laconia, N. H., Sept. 13—Harken blondes. It's the season for honey-hair again this year.

Seventeen-year-old Jeanne Poisson, Manchester, blonde beauty, was selected "Miss New Hampshire" by the state hairdressers' association.

FALSE TEETH
Can Not Embarrass

Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their teeth dropped or slipped at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH, the alkaline powder, on your plates. Makes false teeth stay in place and feel comfortable all day long. Sweetens breath. Get FASTEETH at any drug store. Accept no substitute.

Bishops Conduct Dr. Jones Rites

Episcopal bishops of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, the Rt. Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill and the Rt. Rev. James DeWolf Perry, officiated today at funeral services for Dr. Daniel Fiske Jones, internationally known Boston surgeon and Harvard overseer, at Trinity Church.

A private burial was held at Walnut Hill Cemetery.

Dr. Jones, for many years head surgeon at Massachusetts General Hospital, a chief surgeon at New England Deaconess Hospital and consulting surgeon at 10 other regional hospitals, died Saturday at his Beacon street home.

Patients Calmed In Hospital Blaze

Patients were awakened for a time today when fire broke out in the bakery of the New England Baptist hospital, Parker Hill avenue, Roxbury.

Doctors and nurses toured the wards to assure their charges that there was no danger.

Richard Ely Dead

Defective Wiring Starts Capitol Fire

Washington, Sept. 13 (INS)—Defective wiring wiring was blamed today for causing the fire among some slabs of cork stored under a portion of the United States Capitol yesterday.

While the smouldering cork produced considerable smoke, damage was negligible.

BOSTON after DARK

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Now in the matter of spaghetti, it comes out that you can't make fun of spaghetti in Italy, and in connection with this the lads in process of filming "The Adventures of Marco Polo," have just had a bit of sub-adventure . . . As a result (such are movies and such, also, are censors) Marco Polo will discover noodles in China, instead of spaghetti . . . That is, he'll discover noodles in the version for Italy's moviegoers, but it'll be the real McCoy spaghetti in films distributed throughout the rest of the universe . . . Premiers in the Roman country frown on spaghetti being used in comedy scenes, although the stuff really was unearthed in the Orient in the XIIIth century by Kid Marco . . . The comedy sequence in the Samuel Goldwyn film comes when Marco (played by Gary Cooper) and two fellow-adventurers, H. B. Warner and Ernest Truex, are shown fumbling with the new tidbit and learning how to guzzle it . . . They shot two sets of takes, one with spaghetti, the other with the noodles . . .

Some of these worthies being what they are in the heat of [illegible], the newcomer found a spot to [illegible] a knock for his own man, asserting that the two others were candidates [illegible] for favors [illegible] . . . Well, the lad who'd deserted this candidate to go with a second, took up [illegible] the argument he'd left, and the argument waxed pretty hot . . . Then one of the original three who'd been chatting turned on the newcomer and barked:

"Scram, heel. I just saw you with your candidate and don't tell us he didn't shoo you over to listen in here!" . . .

Fighting poses were struck [illegible] —were falling, then out the two others stepped in and bundled a real scrap [illegible] . . .

Mussolini's Son to Visit Hollywood

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor
International News Service

(Copyright, 1937, by International News Service)

Los Angeles, Sept. 13—Mussolini's younger son, Vittorio, reaches Hollywood September 25 to learn the motion picture business.

Il Duce is entrusting his boy to Hal Roach who will instruct him in the fundamentals of motion picture making. Well, he couldn't have a better mentor than Hal who was a pioneer and knows his movies from A to Z. While in Hollywood young Mussolini will be the house guest of the Roaches.

Louella O. Parsons

Hal has been in Rome conferring with Italy's dictator in regard to forming [illegible] at the Citta Cinema, Mussolini's own movie plant. As I said in a recent Sunday article, Mussolini needs a few lessons in picture making and apparently he must realize that or he wouldn't be sending his boy to Hollywood.

Paramount (and it is no publicity agent's pipedream) is bringing world famous painters and the models whose portraits they contrive to the [illegible] Hollywood. They will be the piece de resistance in a second edition of "Artists and Models," to be titled "Around the World With Artists and Models."

Writer J. P. McEvoy, who has just returned from [illegible] the globe, scripts the story which Arthur Hornblow will produce. Don't get the idea that he will have a yearly "Artists and Models" to compete with "Gold Diggers," "Broadway Melody," "Big Broadcast" or "Hollywood Hotel." Para will make only one more and then forget the idea.

It really took the radio to wake the movies up to Eric Blore's popularity. Several of the big air-shows sought him for a comedy spot so Sam Briskin decided the Blore must have what it takes especially after the box office receipts bore additional evidence of the way the theater going public reacted to his nonsense.

Blore is now to be starred in "Hubert's Folly," a yarn by Edward Hartman which Helen Meinardi is scripting. Eric plays an Englishman loose in Noo Yawk. Can't you see him?

Chatter in Hollywood: October is whispered as the month in which Aileen Pringle will marry B. P. Schulberg. I am printing this only as a rumor because it was not told me by either B. P. or Aileen, but I understand the prospective bridegroom has been telling his friends that the very attractive "Pringle" is the next Mrs. Schulberg.

She's dark, pretty and ROLAND is that proud of her; ANN HARDING testing for "Gone With the Winds"—must be for Melanie; HARRY BRIAN and BIG BOY WILLIAMS dueting at a nite spot; CHARLES CORRELL, better known as the second half of Amos and Andy, having his wedding breakfast at a popular cafe and then leaving with his pretty bride for a secret honeymoon.

Special at Dudley

As an added attraction for today and tomorrow, Roxbury's Dudley Theater will show the Louis-Farr fight films. Fifteen rounds of the actual fight offer a ringside seat to patrons.

Helen Hayes Coming to Shubert

Helen Hayes, who has played 500 performances in "Victoria Regina" in New York City, is coming to the Shubert for a four-week stay on September 20. This will mark her first appearance in Boston since "Mary of Scotland."

This is probably Miss Hayes' most successful play. Even without all the publicity the attraction has had from the events occurring within the past year in the British royal family, the play would have been a great success on the basis of its vast charm and warm portrayal of England's great Queen.

Laurence Housman, the author of this chronicle play, tells, in his recently published book, "The Unexpected Years," how "Victoria Regina" has been so responsible for making these present years of his life so truly unexpected.

In his early years he had lived on as little as $15 a week, and usually he had been going along on $2500 a year. Now, as the author of "Victoria Regina," he has been made by Gilbert Miller, the producer, and Helen Hayes, the star, into so great a success that he has averaged around $2000 a week in royalties.

At Gayety

New Gayety's stage show, "Club Paradise Revue," with a cast of 50, is featuring Carmelita and Mario, ballroom dancers; Scotty and Bennett, the singing and swinging songsters; Carleton and Julie, youthful sophisticates of the dance; Marie Allaire, direct from New York Broadcasting Station.

Guild's First Play Next Monday

The Theater Guild is presenting for its production this season Ben Hecht's new play, "To Quito and Back," with Sylvia Sidney, who is returning to the legitimate stage after seven years in motion pictures, and Leslie Banks, who is returning to this country after six years of notable successes in London, both on stage and screen.

Opening at the Colonial on Monday, September 20, for an engagement of two weeks only, this will be the initial offering of the Theater Guild and American Theater Society subscription series for the season of 1937-38. Matinees will be given on Thursdays and Saturdays.

In his play, Mr. Hecht finds two lovers in the midst of a stirring, although somewhat miniature revolution in Ecuador, South America.

This story of "love among the intellectuals" is said to be daring and illuminating. With a background of revolutionary conflict, which carries with it overtones of larger, world-shaking repercussions, "To Quito and Back" is a provocative play which is likely to cause much discussion.

French Musical at South Station

Now playing at the South Station Theater is "Marseillaise, Song of Revolt," one of the finest historical shorts of the season. The romantic story of the French national anthem has been condensed to make a dramatically effective tabloid musical.

A. F. OF L. OPENS NEW DRIVE FOR GUILD UNITS

St. Louis, Sept. 13 (AP)—The American Federation of Labor outlawed the American Newspaper Guild today and announced the beginning of "a militant drive" against the CIO unit through its own newspaper unions.

William Green, president of the A. F. of L., who announced the expulsion of the Guild, said in a prepared statement:

"All news and editorial employes of newspapers throughout the country will be invited to join federal unions organized by the A. F. of L.

"It is expected members of the Guild who voted against affiliation with the committee for industrial organization, or against its political policies will form the nucleus of this new organization."

Headquarters of the Guild previously announced in New York a referendum of the membership showed [illegible] in favor and [illegible] against the action of the National Guild convention here last June which voted to affiliate with the CIO headed by John L. Lewis.

Green said the new A. F. of L. sponsored union for newspaper workers "will be accorded the fullest support by the mechanical trades unions of the A. F. of L. which for years have been solidly entrenched in the newspaper business.

"Without the help and support of these unions the Guild will be unable to maintain its position. The A. F. of L. will resist any attempt of the CIO Guild to bring non-editorial and clerical workers into Guild membership. Such employes will be urged to join the established printing and mechanical trades unions."

Asked about the action planned in outlawing the Guild, Green stated:

"All state and central bodies of the A. F. of L. will be instructed to expel local chapters of the Guild and to refuse to give them any further co-operation, as they are no longer eligible to membership because of association with the CIO."

Jury Indictment Faces Pimental In Harris Death

The Suffolk County grand jury today returned a secret indictment against Joseph Pimental, Cambridge "strongboy," in connection with the brutal murder more than a year ago of five-year-old Chester Harris of Cambridge.

Pimental, now awaiting trial on other sex charges in Charles street jail, will be arraigned tomorrow on the murder indictment, and three other indictments charging him with attacking young girls in Roxbury and annoying children on the street.

FOLEY PLANS TRIAL

Assistant District Attorney Frederick T. Doyle, prosecuting the case, was present in Judge Thomas Dowd's courtroom when the grand jury returned the indictment.

District Attorney Foley previously announced he would waste no time in bringing Pimental to a speedy trial once the indictment was returned by the grand jury.

Spearhead of a drive against sex offenders as sponsored by the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, is District Attorney Foley's plan to bring the Cambridge man to trial within a few weeks.

RETRACTS "CONFESSIONS"

Pimental allegedly made confessions to police of murdering the Harris boy and took them to the scene, pointing out the spots where he said he buried the dead child and his clothes after the fiendish crime.

Since his arrest Pimental has retracted the confessions he allegedly made. The government is prepared to present more than 40 witnesses present when he allegedly made his confessions and led officers to the murder spot.

Can't Budge It! What? Budget

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

They say the next government budget will be seven hundred thousand million dollars. That's about a dollar for every mile to the moon and looks like bookkeeping on the side of a box car.

That's a lot of money even in a budget. When expenditures eat up taxation it means you are inviting the ocean into your rowboat through a hole in the bottom.

We are still buying gold and still buying silver. If the packratting at Fort Knox continues a dime will soon rate a military funeral.

Governments are like individuals. If you don't make anything you are a bum. If you spend more than you make then success doesn't changed you a bit. You are still a bum.

MAYOR LA GUARDIA

'American Workers Must Have Security'

LAGUARDIA THRILLS LAWRENCE WORKERS

Lawrence, Sept. 13—"Organize, but not until every means of conference is exhausted should labor resort to 'legitimate' use of the strike," Mayor Fiorello La Guardia had urged 11,000 employes of the American Woolen Company mills here today.

He urged them to take advantage of new Federal laws and join the move toward organized labor to obtain their rights.

The New York mayor, whose name has been linked with John L. Lewis in the possible formation of a third-party labor coalition move in the 1940 national election, addressed a mass meeting of textile workers here.

TO HOLD ELECTION

His remarks came shortly before an election is to be held among the workers to determine whether the Textile Workers' Organizing Committee, a CIO affiliate, should be the sole bargaining agent for the workers.

"The day of the derby-hatted, cigar-chewing walking delegate who often settled a strike by shaking down an employer, is over forever."

SEES SETTLEMENT

"It is evident your difficulties are to be settled without strife," he said.

He did not touch on the points at issue in the CIO, which sponsored the mass meeting, or the AFL.

"In order to have prosperity, American industry must have stability and in order to have stability, American workers must have security," the fiery New York mayor urged.

"I want the American standard of living to be what your protectionist friends say it is when they are arguing for a tariff."

FORD WORKERS AIR CHARGES

Charges the Ford Motor Company plant in Somerville allegedly violated provisions of the National Labor Relations act were heard in Boston today by the National Labor Relations Regional Board.

The United Automobile Workers of America charged the company with discharging 22 men last May and refusal to rehire them because they were active members of the union.

Alfred J. Soper of Cambridge, former Ford worker, testified that after he had passed out CIO cards he was summoned into the plant superintendent's office and asked whether he liked his job or not.

Soper replied that he did not, said he was dissatisfied with conditions and his foreman.

BACON FUNERAL ON TUESDAY

Funeral services for William F. Bacon, 77, veteran presiding justice of Newton District Court and prominent practicing attorney, who died yesterday at his summer home in Gloucester, will be held tomorrow at 2.30 p. m. from his Newton home, on Hyde avenue.

Judge Bacon was one of the objectives of Governor Curley's measure to oust jurists over 70 years old last December, but action against him was dropped as his friends bitterly fought the issue.

In April he petitioned Governor Hurley for retirement on pension but the Governor declined to take action, preferring to wait until the increased pension bill went into effect.

Graduated from Harvard College with Phi Beta Kappa honors in 1882 and from Harvard Law School in 1886, Judge Bacon maintained a Boston law office for 40 years, serving as counsel for Canadian National Railways.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Bessie Sayford Bacon; a son, Frederick S. Bacon of Newton; a daughter, Mrs. Edward V. Ambler of Gloucester, and two grandchildren, Bessie R. and William E. Bacon of Newton.

Fine 2 in Dumping Of Oil Into Harbor

In the first case of its kind in many years, Domenic Napoli, 54, master, and Stephen Kijani, 45, engineer of the S. S. Mayan, a freighter, were fined $50 each in federal court today after pleading guilty to dumping oil from a ballast tank into the waters of Boston harbor.

BAY STATE LEADS U. S. IN WAGE STANDARDS

Washington, Sept. 13 (AP)—Labor Department officials said today Massachusetts led all other states in establishing wage standards under State Minimum Wage laws.

Louise Stitt, chief of the women's bureau, said a survey of such laws in 21 states, District of Columbia and Puerto Rico, showed Massachusetts far in the lead with mandatory orders for 10 industries prepared for October 1, when the new Massachusetts law becomes effective.

The new law, Miss Stitt said, provides fines and imprisonment for violators.

The industries for which Massachusetts has prepared wage regulations include laundry and cleaning; electrical equipment and supplies; retail stores; boot and shoe; cut stock and findings; men's clothing and raincoats; candy; men's furnishings; brush; and women's clothing and corsets.

The Labor Department also has tabulated two other industries for which Massachusetts has issued directory orders which become mandatory three months after issuance. They cover employes making stationery goods and envelopes, and toys, games and sporting goods.

Since the Supreme Court's action in March, upholding the Washington state minimum wage law, Rhode Island has set wage regulations for the wearing apparel industries and is now conducting hearings for the laundry business.

Only four other states, Miss Stitt said, have taken similar action since the decision. They are Illinois, Ohio, New Jersey and Oregon.

1000 Savings Bank Men to Meet

More than 1000 savings bank officers and trustees will meet at the New Ocean House, Swampscott, September 16, 17 and 18, for their 20th annual meeting.

A trustees session will open Thursday afternoon. Commissioner of Banks William P. Husband, Jr., and Dr. Harold Stonier, educational director of the American Institute of Banking, will be the principal speakers.

Business sessions of the meeting Friday will revolve around mortgage problems, railroad bonds and insurance rates. In the afternoon delegates will relax with a golf tournament at the Salem Country Club. A special program has been arranged for the wives of the delegates.

VIEWS ON VITAL AFFAIRS GIVEN BY HITLER

Nuremberg, Germany, Sept. 13 (INS)—Germany's new defense forces have brought her independence, Chancellor Adolf Hitler declared today in an address following a huge military and air service review, part of the program of the Nazi party congress.

Prince Chichibu, brother of the emperor of Japan, and Nicholas Franco, brother of Generalissimo Francisco Franco, were guests of Hitler at the review.

Thousands of soldiers paraded, trucks and tanks rolled through Nuremberg's ancient streets, scores of airplanes soared in formation, climaxing the yearly display which brought together more than a quarter-million party members.

Hitler's views on colonies, war, economics, and other subjects now troubling a puzzled world were given informally to a small group of foreign correspondents at a reception in Nuremberg Castle. Summarized, they are:

COLONIES

"We will not be able to settle down until the colonial question is solved; and it will have to be solved one way or the other. We have a moral right to that which belongs to us (Germany's former colonies). It isn't true that trade follows the flag; it is people who follow the flag, and trade follows people."

MUSSOLINI'S COMING TRIP

"The visit speaks for itself."

WAR

"It isn't a question of war or peace, but of common sense. I am one of those people who have unshaken faith in common sense.

"We are, for our part, quite calm. We do not want to do anything against anybody. Nobody can do anything against us, although there was a time when we feared such an eventuality. A disarmed Germany was a dangerous vacuum in Germany which has now has been filled—and very well filled.

ECONOMICS

"There is no question of starving for Germans, but there are difficulties we must meet. Others say that we are only 10 per cent short of food and raw materials. But our answer to that is that percentage involves the nourishment of six or seven million people—and that is the crux of the problem."

THE FUTURE

"If all other countries had such great domestic plans as we have, the world would be concentrating more on peace. We have plans for 30 or 40 years more. For examples, there are the vast road building program, and reconstruction of Berlin, as part of a gigantic reconstruction program throughout Germany, including the Munich Exhibition of 1945 and Berlin Exhibition of 1950."

NAZISM

"It's just beginning."

Radio Meet to See X-Ray Movies

Chicago, Sept. 13 (INS)—X-Ray motion pictures, the elusive goal of science for more than 30 years, will be projected on a screen here this week at the 55th annual Congress of Radiology.

The films are to be shown and described by Dr. Russell Reynolds, head of the radiology department of the Charing Cross Hospital, London.

These "cineradiographs," he explained today, will show the hand and leg joints in action, the motions of the neck in swallowing and the action of the heart, among other functions of the body.

Boston Man Dies Suddenly in N. Y.

New York, Sept. 13 (AP)—A man in whose clothing police found papers indicating he was Edwin Turner of Charles street, Boston, died today after collapsing at Sixth avenue and 42d street.

Naugatuck, Conn., Sept. 13 (AP)—Norval Turner, son of Edwin Turner, who died suddenly in New York today, said his father had been away from his family 20 years and had not been heard from since.

The son said his father probably was not aware that his wife, Irene E. Turner, died last week.

Art Search Ends at Home

New York, Sept. 13 (AP)—A rare Syrian glass vase, which the Metropolitan Museum of Art located right in New York after a world-wide search, was on display today. The vase, dating back to the sixth or seventh century, was said by museum officials to be one of four of its type in existence.

Dr. M. S. Diamond, curator of Near Eastern art at the museum, said he had made many trips to Europe in search of the vase. He finally found it—in an East Side curio shop here.

HANEY Says to Hold STOCKS

BIG RALLY SEEN DUE

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University

(Special to Boston Evening American)

New York, Sept. 13—The stock market showed so many signs of a selling climax last week that the technical rally now due should amount to more than any seen during the decline. Such being the case, it does not seem well to sell stocks at present.

In fact, the trader who tries to make money by "quick turns" will doubtless be buying for a turn.

So many good stocks now show high yields which are well supported by earnings that I expect a good deal of investment buying, and I would recommend those who have cash reserves to add moderately to their more likely looking holdings, for the purpose of averaging down their costs.

LAST BREAK DIFFERENT

This last break in the market has been different from the earlier ones. For one thing there was no "news" to hang it on. It came, as it seemed, out of a clear sky. Then, too, there was no "gap" on the Friday crash. And the volume of the selling was far greater than has been seen in months. Considering the conditions that now exist, it seems to have been of climax proportions.

The Friday break came quicker and with less preceding rally. As it began, everybody became very bearish, and pessimism in the Wall street section was so thick that you could cut it with a knife. Of course, there was considerable selling forced by margin calls.

Clearly, widespread liquidation occurred for the first time in a long while. The volume was not only large, but it came along with a broad market in the sense that the number of different issues traded ran up to the high total of 986.

NOTABLE FEATURES

Furthermore, the turn around and rally toward the end had some notable features. Leading stocks such as U. S. Steel, General Motors, General Electric and Kennecott Copper did not sell off at the end Friday, and closed above their lowest levels. Then, on Saturday, it was found that bids were strong enough to cause an opening and to keep a majority of all stocks up for the day.

Two of the most significant facts about Saturday's market are that the volume per hour continued to grow and that the averages closed well up in their price range for the day. Prices opened with gains on purchases of large blocks, and trading activity increased on a price rise for the first time during the September breaks.

I note that in several respects the market action was like that on April 30, 1936. The rally was led by the real market leaders, while many issues sagged a little further. This suggests short covering with a better grade of buying.

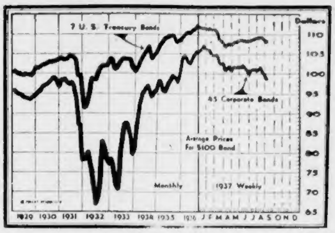
BONDS RENEW DECLINE



Renewal of a downward price trend was evidenced in government and corporate bonds in the latter part of August and early September.

The decline in the Treasury issues placed Standard Statistics' index of the group at the lowest average level in nine weeks. From the beginning of this year, the Treasury bonds have lost 3.3 per cent of their value.

Corporate issues, on the average, are at the lowest price since October, 1936. From the record high point reached in January, 1937, the group has declined 6.9 per cent in value.

Business Upturn Seen Despite Adversities

Despite the many cross-currents in the present situation, at least a full seasonal advance in business is indicated this fall, says the United Business Service in its latest weekly report. However, there are some modifying factors that may prevent the fall upswing from gaining its full momentum until later in the season.

Most important of these is the weakness recently displayed in the stock market. Stock prices are in it more by prospective profits rather than volume, and the market weakness probably reflects the fear that higher labor costs and taxes cannot be entirely offset by higher consumer prices without reducing sales volume.

At the same time, declines in the prices of grains and cotton have led to a restriction of large scale buying in the hope of still better purchasing opportunities later on.

Finally, there has come a new outburst of unsettling incidents in the Mediterranean and fears of American or British involvement in the Far Eastern conflict.

The Service concludes, however, that the declines in the security and commodity markets have probably about run their course and that despite threatening talk there will be no general war in Europe. Furthermore, a united demonstration of some sort by Britain and the United States in the Shanghai area is possible and would improve the situation there. Thus, signs still point to a fall upturn in business in spite of the delaying effect of temporary unsettling developments.

FORBES Views Stock FALL

ASKS IF IT'S TOO FURIOUS

By B. C. FORBES

Before going on vacation, this writer urged a cautious attitude toward securities. Too many stocks, even of highest grade, seemed to have been pushed to levels not justified by actual or prospective profits. Moreover, readers of this column were repeatedly informed that industrial, financial and other leaders were far from enthusiastic over what might happen, especially in Washington. As frequently emphasized here, business was better than sentiment high-up. For this and other reasons, it seemed prudent to exercise conservatism stock marketwise.

It would be hypocritical to claim that any such violent down swing as last week's was anticipated.

But what does calm reasoning suggest?

A stock that did not appeal as worth $150 two or three months ago may merit consideration today at $100.

Income yields are now substantially better.

And it cannot be contended that either profits or prospects have declined in ratio with the decline in stock quotations.

What underlies the panicky eruption in Wall Street?

The pet explanation is "European war threatenings." However, as already told in this column, Europeans all along have taken a less alarmist view than has apparently prevailed in this country. Is it not significant that Europe is puzzled by our stock market debacle and that there has been no corresponding slump overseas?

My guess is that the extreme [illegible] of the market, brought about by the various severe handicaps imposed by Washington, has been accountable in large measure for the market's movements. It now takes $5000 to buy a hundred shares of a stock selling at $100. But no such amount is involved in selling short.

Professional bears doubtless saw and seized opportunity to pummel quotations. Relatively few buyers were able or disposed to step in.

The writer has not yet had adequate opportunity to find out what's what economically or sentimentally. Superficially, basic conditions seem to have undergone no drastic change during recent weeks.

U.S. Money Policies Change

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The week-end batch of Washington news contains some surprising data in regard to monetary policy. [illegible] has [illegible] security prices [illegible] official Washington. [illegible] be noted [illegible] to prevent a [illegible] squeeze [illegible] 'cheese' of [illegible] reference.

Dow theorists are not in agreement as to the implications of the recent break through important resistance levels by both industrials and rails. Some contend firmly that it means a bear market has begun. Others feel that when the length and breadth of the [illegible] drawing is studied the decline [illegible] with [illegible] could go further [illegible] lating them. The discussion is likely to become decidedly academic. And the best thing for the average trader to do is look on differences of opinion in such a fight and determine to place accounts in the strongest position possible as a matter of personal protection.

As this usual paragraph on the current market is written, prices are responding to what we like to think are the inflationary implications in the government monetary policy. Just how far and how long it will go and last is a real problem. It must be noted that the reversal came fast and nothing resembling a base had formed. In that respect the upturns must be viewed as a temporary affair. We prefer to watch it carefully before making any commitment as to its possible extent. Of individual groups rails stand out as the issues most likely to rally most sharply.

'El' Seeks Approval of $1,800,000 Issue

The Boston Elevated today asked the Public Utilities Commission to approve a new bond issue of $1,800,000.

Counsel for the Elevated, Willis B. Downey, told the commission the proposed bond issue is to replace a similar amount due on October 1. He further stated that it would carry a two per cent coupon and would be taken up entirely by the Boston Metropolitan District trustees.

According to Downey the railway will have outstanding after the new bonds are issued a principal amount of $16,000,000.

The commission took the matter under advisement after counsel for the Elevated concluded by saying the last session of the legislature approved the issue proposed.

Margin Set Up Eyed

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

Special to Boston Evening American

New York, Sept. 13—Wall Street men contend that last week's wide fluctuations in stock prices show that the new regime of controlled speculation has not perfected a technique for 'loss-less' trading.

It is of course true the extraordinarily high initial margins required delay additional margin calls and even in such breaks as experienced last week limit the amounts of additional margin required.

Nevertheless old timers are skeptical about the ultimate effects on the profit position of lay traders. It is recalled that early in 1929 brokers generally felt that the higher than customary margins then in effect gave unusual strength to the technical position of the market.

Edwin Lefevre challenged the notion and took the caustic position that in the long run the broader margins would merely mean that traders would lose more when the Bear shakeouts came in the next major financial crisis. Mr. Lefevre's thesis was pessimistic but it proved to be true.

Although brokers desiring greater volume would doubtless like to see a relaxation of margin requirements there is also a small but articulate group that advocates complete cessation of margin [illegible] The [illegible] a cash basis [illegible] that [illegible] for [illegible] The [illegible] borrower as well as the [illegible]

When the SEC was first set up one of the ablest and most experienced speculators in Wall Street told me that the danger lies in the fact that the new setup would give the small speculator a false sense of security. He said that the little trader, proceeding in accordance with government approved rules, would tend to minimize the actual hazards assumed.

How much this false sense of security has permeated the consciousness of the small trader is a matter of conjecture, yet sensational price swings such as occurred last week tend to be rude awakeners to the realities.

Of course, the SEC has gone far to make it clear to investors that the commission does not affirmatively recommend the purchase [illegible]

Recent market events [illegible] attainment of the hope [illegible] James M. Landis, retiring chairman of the SEC for a stock market that would synchronize more closely with significant changes in the economy situation has not yet been accomplished. For there was nothing in the tangible news of business to account for declines of the size experienced on Tuesday and Friday.

The street concedes an improvement in the quality of new issues, and in the behavior of vendors. On the speculative side likewise, there has been a striking reduction in the relative volume of professional speculation. Moreover, there has been an elimination of the shoe string speculator. The whole role of speculation in the economic activity of the nation has been enormously compressed.

Yet in spite of this area [illegible] adheres to its own laws rather than to the statutes and no formula has yet been devised to make even government sponsored speculation [illegible]

ROOSEVELT TRIP WEST MAY STIR 1940 FIGHT

HUNT GIRL'S DIARY IN MATHESON CASE

With police pressing every effort to uncover the missing diary of Maybelle Matheson, 17-year-old Roxbury mill worker murdered 10 years ago, Captain John F. McCarthy of the Boston homicide squad planned a conference with District Attorney Foley today for a study of evidence he hopes may convict Chester Pearse of New Jersey.

The diary in which the murdered girl kept a fatuous account of her romances is now believed by police to contain the clue that will either clinch the case against Pearse, accused by his brother, or free him of the murder accusation.

Speeding their actions since the dramatic announcement of Leslie Pearse, [illegible] purporting to reveal that the Matheson girl was slain by his own brother, police have [illegible] into his former years spent in Cambridge, Somerville and Quincy.

30 FLOATS SET FOR PARADE

THIS IS LIFE

By

Robert E. Rogers

I suppose that the recently-announced decision that a mark of 50 is high enough to procure admission to the Boston Teachers' College does not mean much to the average citizen, nor even to the parents and relatives of the [illegible] candidates.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

But all teachers will understand that it means merely a [illegible] [illegible]

School Committeeman Would Drop All Bars

[illegible]

As a matter of fact it is my considered opinion that entrance to a teachers college ought to be harder, not easier—than entrance to a college that gives only the A.B. degree. Admissions should be higher—not lower. Entrance admission ought to be not one whit lower than 75 in all subjects, with 75 as the lowest grade for continuation.

Clumsy Plan Seen To Keep Jobs Going

Lower grades than these may be suitable for schools that go in for general education, but for students who, after all, are training for a profession, something more is needed. Requirements for a teacher ought to be as high as those for an engineer or a doctor or lawyer. Teaching is, or should be, a difficult and exacting job. The whole aim of teaching is to turn out a student who shall be better than his (or her) teacher. But even the best teachers can't do much with the kind of material who, by straining up on his (or her) intellectual toes, can barely make a 50 entrance grade. And what teaching these ineffectuals will hand on to another generation of children does not bear thinking of.

I suspect that the whole job is merely a clumsy and stupid means to keep the Teachers College faculty in jobs. It looks to be high time to close the school, use the faculty to strengthen the staffs of the various high schools, and to stop training teachers until there is once more a real demand for them.

CALLS ON WOMEN TO HIDE CHARMS

Chicago, Sept. 12 (INS)—Gianchand Motwane, wealthy Bombay, India, merchant here on a business trip today, confounded reporters by declaring:

"Women should dress more like men, and men more like women, because women should hide their charms, while men have none to hide."

SPURNED EAST BOSTON YOUTH SEIZED BY POLICE

When she refused to take a ride with a jilted East Boston young man, he deliberately stepped on the gas and ran her down, this Revere girl, Miss Eunice Marras, 19, said today as her injuries confined her to her bed at her home in Atlantic avenue, Revere. Police sought her alleged assailant on a warrant charging him with assault with a "dangerous weapon to wit: an automobile."

Death followed a heart attack.

Tomorrow's services will be held at 2:30 p. m. at 305 Beach street, Revere. Tonight's services will be conducted by the Masonic order.

The body will be cremated at Mount Auburn, in Cambridge. Mr. Pray is survived by two sisters and three brothers.

Financial problems of local government have become increasingly complex. This is due in part to more varied sources of revenue and, in part, to the greater variety of services performed by government. Tax delinquency was the first real cause of local financial difficulty.

PROBLEM COMPLEX

"Care of unemployed again is made necessary by national economic conditions.

Defaults on municipal bonds and interest are becoming less. Tax collections formerly took care of debt retirement and current expenses. Then tax collections failed due to economic conditions nationally.

The revenue problem becomes more complex. There is a general shifting of the tax burden. One group seeks to curtail the most prevalent and productive local revenue, the taxation of real estate.

The ultimate answer for the future is better trained public officials and the improvement of personnel in all departments.

BLOODSTAIN MYSTERY IN WIDOW DEATH TOLD

[illegible]

The prosecution was expected to end its side in Dedham superior court late today or early tomorrow and the case probably will be completed this week.

Resuming testimony he began last Friday, Dr. Joseph T. Walker, state police chemist, declared frankly today on the witness stand that tests he made of blood samples were unsatisfactory as to determining whether the blood was of one person or of two persons.

Tests did reveal, however, that it was human blood, but it could not be definitely classified as to which of the four types of human blood.

"NO STAINS IN AUTO"

He also said he found no bloodstains in Bartolini's automobile or on the cleaver and carving knife the state contends were used in dissecting the Weymouth "merry widow's" body.

The state police chemist was followed on the stand by Dr. Frank Stratton, Boston police chemist, who likewise testified to making [illegible]

Although the public school season is just getting under way, there has already been time, in at least one classroom, for a few lessons in the proper formula for business letters.

ANN MARSTERS

Champagne, Straw Hats Sold at U. S. Auction

Champagne and straw hats made up a part of the public auction of unclaimed and abandoned merchandise conducted the other day by the United States Customs in New York. It brought the government more than $3000.

The champagne—twenty-six cases of it—was sold for $376.20. There was quite a bit of unclaimed rum, too, as well as creme de menthe and gin.

The straw hats sold for 11 cents a dozen, which sounds like an excellent bargain.

John Roosevelt is not the complaining type of young man. He didn't even complain to his father about the Cannes champagne-squirting story. But there IS one thing that John is beginning to protest about. He insists that it's time he stopped wearing clothes handed down from his elder brothers. Seems it's been a family custom for quite some time.

BRAVE 'SKY ISLAND' FOR RARE SECRETS

Grand Canyon, Ariz., Sept. 13 (AP)—A party of scientists winged across Grand Canyon today on the first leg of a perilous journey to an "island in the sky" they hope will take them 35,000 years back into history.

Tonight they camp on the north rim of the canyon and Tuesday morning they plan to begin a grueling climb up Shiva's Temple, a mile and a half high plateau that juts straight up from the gorge's floor.

What they will find atop this wooded [illegible] of that ancient time when receding glaciers cut away the soil around it and left stranded all the creatures that inhabited it they do not know. Not in the memory of man has anyone scaled the temple.

How the descendants of those marooned creatures, probably only spruce squirrels—have survived the ages is what the scientists seek to learn.

Wuxtree: Horror of Race War Averted In Rhode Island

Austen Lake

JUST WHEN RHODE ISLAND'S TEMPERISH little governor seemed ready to call out the troops and storm Narragansett's horse park at point of the bayonet, arbitration took place of arms and the boiling animosities between the rival vote-cadging factions have gentled down to a watchful simmer.

The background of political cupidity, sectional jealousies and backstairs conspiracy which has been going on between these two waspish factions forms a miniature model of the commercial mad-fits which cause most European wars. Little animosities among spread-eagle statesmen of neighboring nations have spotted history with bloody wars which always ended in the slaughter of innocent armies drafted by avaricious dictators under pretext of serving God, king and country.

So the blocky governor of Rhode Island seized on the slurs of the cantankerous horse capitalist and political puppeteer, to mobilize his militia and threaten to capture Narragansett by force of arms. And the pesky race landlord summoned his Pawtucket allies to meet the attack with pistols, gas bombs and bullets.

The Makings of a War

THIS IS A SITUATION WHICH HAS CAUSED the bugles to blow in many a Balkan state. And presently battle flags would be flying with crowds of people yelling in a pitch of patriotic hysteria as the lads in khaki stepped, grim and purposeful, to the sound of martial music.

Pulses stir at such times and blind devotion to the obscure principles which caused the war choke the beholders in the neck and impel hordes of adolescent kids to fib their way past the recruiting officers for the thrill of hacking enemy adolescents into unsightly hulks, or being hacked.

The real motive in the mass quarrel is always cunningly obscured by batteries of propaganda experts who sell the citizens distortions and half-truths in emotional editorials.

So, presently when the first casualty lists arrive from the Narragansett's front lines, reports of fiendish atrocities by the Providence regiments would be flooding the Pawtucket press and the home folks would be reading how the brutal butchers from Newport and West Warwick were flinging phosphorus grenades down the airholes of the first aid stations and garroting babes as they were being trundled in perambulators. This would be known to Pawtucketers as the war to preserve the inalienable right of a free people to wager their earnings without coercion and by self determination. And Walter O'Hara would be equipping field hospitals and ambulance units, with debutante daughters of Pawtucket climbing into riding boots, tailored whip cords and shiny Sam Brown belts to drive staff generals in the safety areas of the rear.

Pawtucket society matrons would open canteens and feed jelly sandwiches to the brave boys in the leave areas, glowing virtuously at doing their bit.

And the war time mayor, Thomas J. McCoy, would call on the citizens to subscribe to defense loans to their last small coin, with breakage on the dime, and abstain from oils, fats and sugar for the sake of the intrepid lads in the combat areas. The parsons of Pawtucket would preach that an all-seeing sympathy was on their side and the citizens would be warned to show no twinkle of light after dark, lest the Providence heathen rain down aerial bombs and lay the streets in tangled drifts of brick and timbers, or reduce the suburbs to smoking ruins which sent up black, spiralling smudges. The roads would be choked with refugees carrying their household effects on their backs.

Heroes Always Get It in the Neck

IT WOULD NOT BE A PRETTY WAR ALONG the battle lines of the Blackstone Valley, where the governor's militia would be pelting trench mortar shells, making vast earth tremors and blowing holes in O'Hara's pent house and pari mutuel coops. But the neighboring states would wax prosperous selling munitions to the belligerents on de-

30 Tufts Hear Grid Trumpet

Manly Must Rebuild Team

Thirty grid aspirants, including all nine veteran lettermen, reported to Coach Lew Manly this morning in the cage of the Cousens gymnasium as first fall practice was called.

Coach Manly was highly pleased with the turnout, and as most of the veterans are on hand, he has already started serious training.

Captain Harold Zimman, regular 250-pound tackle, who was an invalid all winter because of a football injury last year, seemed to be in the best of condition, and had dropped about 20 pounds of excess weight.

NINE LETTERMEN

The lettermen reporting are Louis Abdu, Carl Blanchard, Bennie Collier and Jim Weldon, four 160-pound lads, who are expected to hold down the backfield berths; Al Pearson and Jimmy Dodwell, regular ends from last season; Al Bennett, who may be used at guard or end; Giraud Edwards, who substituted at tackle all last season, and Captain Zimman.

The group of 30 was divided into three teams, Assistant Coaches Charlie Hingston and Sike Rachdorf supervising one each, while Lew Kyrios, veteran tackle from last season, who will handle the Jayvees this year, took charge of most of the veterans.

NEEDS KICKER

Coach Manly has many problems to solve before his first game scheduled against Colby on Oct. 2 at the Tufts Oval, among them the development of a kicker and a bucker, and someone to replace the all-around Captain Roger Keith, who played his last game a year ago.

Due to the rain the initial practice was held in the huge cage of the Cousens gymnasium, and the boys will remain there until the rainy weather lets up enough for the Tufts Oval to drain off.

Two sessions will be held daily for the remainder of the week, with the possible exception of Saturday afternoon, and all the coaches are begging the favor of the weatherman so they can take their players out onto the field where they will be working out under actual playing conditions.

CY YOUNG Tells Secret OF SUCCESS

Atlanta, Sept. 13 (AP) — They said old Cy Young got by on his "smoke," that he didn't have much of a curve ball, but they were wrong.

In addition to his blinding speed, the famous old time hurling ace had two curves, "and nobody knew about it." Cy attributes a good measure of his success in winning 511 major league games to that secret.

"I've never told this before," said Cy, puffing at an old briar pipe and sprightly looking for his 70 years.

"One of my curves sailed in there as fast as my high, hard one and broke in the reverse. That was what made it hard to hit. It was a narrow curve that broke away from the batter, and went in just like the fast ball. And I had one of those wide-breaking curves.

The "dipsy-do" boys had a hard time handling that reversed fast ball, Cy said. He explained a "dipsy-do" fellow was one of those beautifully-styled catchers who work with the greatest of ease, not "fighting the ball."

When Cy Young quit baseball after the 1911 season he had struck out 2832 men. His record for victorious stands. He lives on a farm now in Ohio near Peoli, where, he says, they have two houses and a postoffice-store, "and I can still pitch—pitch as much hay as any young fellow in the country."

HE'S THE TOP

Ready to roar through opposing elevens, Bob McLeod, Dartmouth's brilliant halfback, is expected to be Earl Blaik's offensive ace this season. Most of the running attack will be built around the Illinois speed king.

CAN YOU PUNT?

Write Earl Blaik at Dartmouth If You Can

Hanover, N. H., Sept. 13—One can't say that Dartmouth's Coach Earl Blaik isn't doing some tall worrying these days. The Indians are badly in need of a punter for the rapidly nearing grid season, and Blaik knows it.

While he doesn't hope to find a booter to fill the shoes left vacant by Hank Whitaker, last fall's signal caller and punting ace, he is working overtime in an effort to discover a gridster who can shoe that pigskin during the pressure of a game.

Fred Hollingworth, regular left halfback on last year's eleven, can boot like nobody's business in practice, but he always finds difficulty in getting the leather away in an important tilt.

Coach Blaik and his assistants didn't give the kicking situation a thought during the summer months. They were sure that Gordon Clark, sensational all-around back on the '36 outfit, would prove an excellent punter during the 1937 campaign.

However, the sad and untimely death of this fine young athlete just three days before the season drills got under way, wrecked the hopes of Blaik and his colleagues of the coaching department.

There is a slight possibility that Warren King, Dartmouth's flashy running back, might be made into a kicker. Although he's never done any shoe work at the New Hampshire school, he was an ace punter back in his prep school years at Peddie.

There's also the possibility that Jimmy Weaver, formerly of Miamisburg High School, or "Cowboy" Hayden, right halfback from Hutchinson, Kan., will be called on to try their skill at punting.

One thing is sure. Until the punting situation is corrected, Coach Blaik will continue right on worrying.

He appreciates the fact that the '37 Dartmouth eleven, with one of the toughest schedules in the school's history, won't win many games unless a kicker is discovered in quick time.

Sept. 25—Bates at Hanover.
Oct. 2—Amherst at Hanover.
Oct. 9—Springfield at Hanover.
Oct. 16—Brown at Providence.
Oct. 23—Harvard at Cambridge.
Oct. 30—Yale at New Haven.
Nov. 6—Princeton at Princeton.
Nov. 13—Cornell at Hanover.
Nov. 20—Columbia at New York.

Sox Return As Bees Go West

By JOE CASHMAN

This is the time of year the synthetic doubleheader dodge demands its toll . . . The Red Sox, home today to make their last Fenway stand against the west, don't swing into action until Wednesday . . . When they'll open and close a one-game series with the White Sox.

The tilt with the Pale Hose originally scheduled for tomorrow was played on an August Sabbath . . . And marked the end of a 12-game win streak by the Croninmen . . . Don't ask us why it was the morrow's and not Wednesday's game that was shifted . . . mid-week rain would wash the remaining contest out for good . . . And give the natives four off days in a row, as Thursday is another open date on their card.

The Sox flashed an admirable display of fighting spirit on the Eastern jaunt just ended . . . Starting off by being out-ducked out of a double-header in New York, they fell into fifth place . . . They turned right around to take the next two games from the Yanks and then cleaned up a two-game series in Philadelphia . . . So they return in fourth place once more.

SOX HAVE 23 TO GO

The Fenway flock has 23 games left to play . . . During this home stand they're carded for one with the White Sox, two with the Indians, two with the Browns, four with the Tigers, three with the Yanks and four with the Athletics.

The Bees are Westward bound today with the cheers of a surprisingly large Sunday crowd of 12,273 ringing in their ears . . . The McKechniemen cut the Giants' lead from 3 to 1½ games by taking two out of three while the Terrymen were at the Hive.

BEES IN CHICAGO

They vow they'll be just as harsh in their treatment of the second-place Cubs, with whom they play four games in three days in Chicago, starting with a doubleheader tomorrow . . . The Giants certainly hope our heroes make good their threat . . . If the Harlemites lose

HARVARD Squad Knows SYSTEM

AND MATERIAL SEEMS O. K.

By WALTER KILEY

Fortified by a weekend devoted to mapping out the coming campaign with his staff of assistants, Head Coach Richard Cresson Harlow will be ready for a flying start by the time Harvard launches its 1937 football season on Wednesday.

It's true that Harvard and Harlow have many mutual gridiron problems to solve before the Crimson machine can trample such teams as Brown, Navy, Dartmouth, Princeton and Army, which it meets on successive Saturdays, and then Davidson and Yale.

But it's likewise true that the problems are no greater than those of the past two years of Harlow's stewardship.

It has taken the former Western Maryland chief two years to install his system of play. This year the groundwork being well constructed, Harvard should pay dividends.

KEVORKIAN STANDOUT

For ends he has Iven Daughters and Bob Green, regulars as sophomores, and Win Jameson, a third junior, and a sub a year ago who may yet win a first string position. Gibby Winter, a senior, and Joe Kennedy, sub two years back who was out a year ago, are other prominent end candidates.

Ken Booth, sub tackle a year ago, Tom Healey, freshman captain, Bob Harkin and Hart Schmidt, the latter pair from junior varsity ranks, will battle it out for the other position.

Captain Russ Allen and Cliff Wilson should plug the holes at guard left by the loss of Kessler and Gaffney. Joe Nee, Dave Glueck, Bob Downes and George Klein are other definite possibilities.

BACKFIELD PROSPECTS

For his backfield Harlow has Bob Stuart, weight 148 pounds but fast and capable; Frank Foley, a good passer and kicker; Tom Smith, 192 pounds; Bob Burnett from the J. V.'s, Bill Clothier, who was out with an old injury a year ago.

By JACK CONWAY

WHEN CALUMET DICK won the $25,000 added Narragansett Special, Mrs. Ella Bryson, wife of the Maryland sportsman, was probably the happiest person in America. The $28,200 purse that went to the owner of the winner will enable Mrs. Bryson to pay the overhead in connection with Calumet Dick and still have some money left with which to purchase some of the latest of fall clothing and a few Christmas gifts.

Mr. Boston

It was only a year ago that Mrs. Bryson put in a claim for Calumet Dick for $2500. At the time the horse was owned by Calumet Farm, one of the better of the breeding farms. Both parties were satisfied with the deal. Calumet Dick later went on to win some important stake races.

Calumet Dick was a starter in the $50,000 Massachusetts Handicap, and ran a good race even though he finished out of the money.

When the track at Narragansett on Saturday came up sloppy, horsemen knew Seabiscuit was unlikely to win. Seabisciut was not rated as a mudder, and it was believed he would not like the sloppy going.

This condition put Calumet Dick very much in the contention. Calumet Dick loves mud. He runs through water and mud like War Admiral and Seabiscuit do over a fast track.

Snark for a time looked as if he was going to beat Calumet Dick. Snark showed a real burst of speed the day he finished second to Fair Knightess, and at Narragansett on Saturday he was even better. He was off to an early lead, and held his advantage until he reached the sixteenth pole. It was only in the closing strides that Calumet Dick, running along the rail where there was plenty of water and mud, made his victory sure.

Racing on a fast track I do not believe there would be any question of Seabiscuit defeating Calumet Dick. Under such conditions it would be Snark who would press Seabiscuit for the advantage in the race through the stretch.

With Seabiscuit a 4-5 favorite, those of us who like to play more than one horse in a race at a price had a chance to come into our own. I bought win tickets on Calumet Dick, Snark and Aneroid, and the $12.80 payoff on the winner justified my daffy system. I have never liked odds on favorites. This is particularly true when the track is sloppy, and the favorite is carrying top weight of 132 pounds.

Sahri II in Brilliant Victory

THE VICTORY of Sahri II in the Gold Cup race at Chicago was not a surprise to New England racegoers. They were more surprised at the winning price of 32 to 1 than they were that the Chilean horse showed the way to a classy field of thoroughbreds. If the race had been run in New England, Sahri II would not have paid more than 6 to 1.

The Chilean horse showed good form at Suffolk Downs and would have done better in the Massachusetts Handicap if it had not been for some poor racing luck in the early part of the race.

Sahri II is one of the finest post actors I have ever seen. This speedy mare walks to the post gate and stands perfectly still until the break. This is the result of perfect training. In Chile they do not have assistant starters, and it is necessary for a horse to be schooled so that he will not be unruly before the start.

The success of the South American horses in this country this season will lead many American horsemen to seek thoroughbreds in Chile and in the Argentine. These countries have some of the finest thoroughbreds in the world.

Tommy Farr May Meet Winner

MONTREAL boxing promoters will make an effort to sign Tommy Farr, Welsh heavyweight, to meet the winner of the Al McCoy-Andre Lenglet ten-round bout which will be held in the Auditorium in Montreal on Thursday night. Farr will be offered a guarantee of $7500 for the proposed match.

Farr will receive $750 for refereeing Thursday night's meeting between McCoy and Lenglet. He will also receive an opportunity to get a close-up of McCoy and Lenglet in action. It is almost a certainty he will meet the winner in Montreal or in some American city.

Lenglet and McCoy have been training for ten days and each is in perfect condition. They will wind up their training in Montreal this week.

McCoy has been working at Buckley's Gym and will leave for Montreal in the company of Bill Brennan, his manager, following today's drill. Al has had Tiger Warrenton as his principal sparring partner. Warrenton is a big rugged fellow with a fine right hand punch and he has given McCoy some real competition.

ferred payments which, after the war, they would default.

And Rhode Island's battle-hymn composers would fashion some bright war ditties to warm the hearts of the marching men—sentimental songs about true and fond females who were presumed to be waiting patiently in the rear, but who, in reality, were quickly bored by absentee affections and were marrying political pets with cushy ordinance jobs. The Pawtucket and Providence girls would be prompt to feel that no healthy female should be exposed to the tedium of wartime waiting, even if their choices were restricted to the timid, physically incompetent and service dodgers who remained behind to hog civilian jobs—which the veterans somehow never got back when they returned as heroes.

What would happen to Narragansett's army in a war of this kind would depend on the force of Pawtucket arms. Perhaps, being driven steadily back toward Boston by the Governor's army, with the flames of her ammunition dumps and immovable supplies lighting the night skies, it is possible that somewhere in the neighborhood of Walpole and North Attleboro the O'Hara-McCoy troops would break into a panicky gallop and ask an armistice.

Peace Cheap at the Price

IN THAT CASE THE ISSUE WOULD BE settled in a peace conference in the Providence state house, with O'Hara being forced to cede his horse park and, possibly, some of his Fall River knitting mills. And out of the whole war, which would cost millions for the sake of a few men's selfish ambitions, Rhode Island would go bankrupt with nobody having any money left to bet on the horses, and the primary motive for the war being forgotten in the problem of feeding the destitute, meeting pension demands and trying to borrow more funds from Massachusetts.

So it is just as well that Rhode Island's temperish Governor countermanded his order to take Narragansett at the point of the bayonet and is doing it by due process of law instead. A hideous catastrophe has been averted and the smiling countryside, with its hot dog wagons and parking pirates, is filled with happy citizens who will bet a little money on the horses and come away without their shirts and, in some cases, without their underwear.

But, as the price of peace, it is little enough.

Argentina Four U. S. Polo Threat

New York, Sept. 13 (AP)—The San Jose team of Argentina and the old Westbury quartet emerged as favorites for the National Open Polo Championship today.

Each team proved its calibre by signal victories over the weekend, in open tourney matches. The old Westbury four routed Aknusti 16 to 3, Saturday, and San Jose galloped to a 14 to 8 triumph over Aurora yesterday.

Saves Game

FOR BEES

this flag, they will blame the Bees who have taken them into camp ten times in 18 tries to date.

Milburn Shoffner, Cleveland cast-off, is the latest white-haired boy of Boston fandom . . . The 32-year-old southpaw who jumped from Scranton to the Hive only last Wednesday and immediately stepped out to blank the Phils with three hits for a 1 to 0 victory, thrilled the Sunday spectators with a relief exhibition that's never been surpassed.

Here was the setting . . . It was the eighth inning . . . The Joints had been blanked for seven innings by Jim Turner and went into the frame trailing 5 to 0 . . . Then New York hits suddenly started dropping all over the lot . . . Almost before the details could be scribbled on the score card the Terrymen had four runs in, the tying run on second and the winning run on first with two out.

IN COMES SHOFFNER

Ira Hutchinson relieved Turner here to pitch to Sam Leslie, pinch-hitting for Dick Coffman, second Giants' pitcher . . . Sambo beat out an infield hit, filling the sacks . . . Joe Moore stepped to bat for the second time in the frame . . . The first three pitches were bad.

Bill McKechnie called a halt . . . He signalled to the bull-pen . . . In came Shoffner cold with the bases loaded, the tying run on third, the winning run on second and the count three balls and no strikes on the batter.

The big fellow blazed over one strike . . . Then another . . . As imperturbed as though he were throwing to a .250 hitter in the N. Y. P. League . . . Three and two . . . Everybody running . . . The windup . . . The pitch . . . Moore swung . . . The ball sailed high in the air towards the rightfield bull pen . . . Gene Moore acted at first as though he didn't see it . . . Then he gave chase . . . And caught the foul.

The crowd went insane over the display of class and guts by the veteran who planned to quit baseball last spring . . . And cried with joy when he heard the Bees were to give him another chance.

The Bees put over another marker in the eighth . . . Shoffner forced Wally Berger, pinch-hitting, to roll into a double play after Bartell had opened the ninth with a single . . . Turner, in the showers, had gained his 17th victory and third over the Giants . . . Thanks to Shoffner, the coolest proposition these eyes have gazed on in ages.

MAC'S DUMB PLAY

The victory enabled Turner to equal roomie Fette's win total . . . Freshman Lou tried for his 18th and first over the Giants in the opener . . . He pitched eight scoreless innings . . . But he was found for three runs in the second . . . "Lefty" Melton, giving only one scratch hit up to the seventh, yielded only one marker as he beat the Bees for the fourth time . . . So Fette, victor over every other rival at least once, has yet to beat the Polo Grounders.

The Giants didn't look like champions in this series . . . They scored in only three out of 30 frames . . . They actually threw the nightcap away by dumb play . . . First-sacker Johnny McCarthy lost a double play by touching the bag instead of runner first in the seventh inning . . . And the Bees, instead of being retired scoreless by Harry Gumbert in the frame, put over four runs.

Even split left the hustling, smart McKechniemen only one game under the .500 mark . . . First division is four games away.

Whether it's the Giants or Cubs, what the Yanks will do to them will be too bad.

By THE INSIDER

(Copyright, 1937, by Boston Evening American)

Providence, R. I., Sept. 13—Generalissimo Walter E. (for Egg) O'Hara, a bit of a horseman in his own right, whose heavy artillery from Fortress Narragansett has been muffled for the past 48 hours, is playing two horses across the board in the famous Rhode Island handicap, where Marshal Robert E. (for Excited) Quinn should rule the favorite.

The story of Mayor "Tom" McCoy, top-notch Democrat in the Blackstone Valley, is, of course, pretty well known now even to those not particularly concerned.

And from the way the Quinn Democratic state committee machine—which McCoy ignores as of no particular importance in the Democratic political scheme of things—keep their eyes pealed on all Hizzoner's maneuvers it looks like they think he may be a termite in the salve again.

PROVERBIAL ACHE

The McCoy-O'Hara Democratic hookup is the proverbial ache below the jaws to Governor Quinn and those who are most benefited by him holding the post that he does now.

So Walter has selected, too, a horse that will wear the spangles of the Republicans, the way that political "Rhody" sizes it up.

And that, to be sure, is none other that State Senator Russell Handy—everyone politically minded says.

Because, after all, even though Walter is a Democrat, he is broad-minded enough about the whole thing not to mind if a Republican sits in the seat of the chief executive of Rhode Island, provided he's Walter's friend.

And there is no doubt in anybody's mind that Walter and Russ are O. K.

OFFERED BAIL

The night that the state gendarmes escorted O'Hara to two arraignments on charges of criminal libel it was State Senator Handy who offered to furnish the bail before McCoy sprung him with crisp new $1000 bills to the grand total of $10,000.

Then, too, State Senator Handy has been a constant visitor to the track.

And is one of the few that gain regular admission to the "inner circle" at the roof garden that looks out over the property that was raised in seven weeks at a fabulous cost.

BECOME FRIENDS

And, as such, naturally, came into contact with the overlord on the Pawtucket penthouse in his kindergarten days as a turfman.

They became friends.

But along this way the "old guard" Republicans sort of look at him somewhat in the way the snobby lady with the lorgnette regards the urchin.

Now it was Governor Quinn who told Handy that so far as holding two jobs were concerned—the racing division and the State Senate—while he was governor—was out.

So Handy had to think it all over, and he decided that it was to the advantage of the party—and maybe to his own a little bit—to keep that seat in the State Senate.

The finding of the state auditors and the admission of the state senator concerning O'Hara's $500 campaign contribution, may or may not be important in the general size-up as politicians and those who vote for them view the situation when everything is boiled down.

OTHER ANGLES

From there the line of political reasoning of the Quinn-state machine Democrats is obvious.

Walter O'Hara now sees something in the Handy future that is worth a $500 campaign contribution to keep him on a minor office.

What can it be?

Let's answer that question by asking another—What is it that the Quinn-Democratic state machine thinks Walter O'Hara is up to politically.

Do they think that he wants to be the governor himself?

Hardly—they do not think that even O'Hara would think that he could come in from Massachusetts and walk right onto the top throne in Rhode Island.

REAL ISSUE

But they do think and everything else to the contrary, this is the real reason for all the zinger-bang that has been turned on O'Hara by the Quinn-Democratic state machine—that he would like to name the governor of Rhode Island.

They think he wants to be Rhode Island political czar.

Would he take Russell Handy, Republican State Senator, for Governor?

And if you ask the Quinn state-machine Democrats that question they will shout at you with almost as much emphasis as Walter O'Hara the same word that he ends his "off the record" low-downs on some of his enemies after he has told a tall tale about them. And that answer is:

"Pause—ah—tive—ely!!!!!"

(As the epic struggle for the Narragansett race track and the Democratic supremacy of Rhode Island winds itself out from day to day, The Insider will take you behind the scenes in the fray that has attracted the nation. Those who follow their sports and politics—and those interested only in the human interest of the strange drama—will see it from behind the scenes. Order your Boston Evening American today.)

Plans U. S. Fight

IN MARCH

Nuremberg, Germany, Sept. 13 (INS)—Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion of the world, today announced he was going to visit the United States early in 1938 to fight a "strong American" prior to his match with Joe Louis in June.

New York, Sept. 13 (INS)—Promoter Mike Jacobs today refused to name the opponent Max Schmeling will meet before fighting Joe Louis for the heavyweight title.

Jacobs said he would have a "good man" ready for Schmeling when the time comes, probably next March.

Schmeling's number of opponents is limited. By the terms of his contract he is not permitted to fight Bob Pastor, Max Baer, Buddy Baer, Jim Braddock or Tommy Farr before meeting Louis.

Nor will he be put in with any dangerous hitter, no matter how soft he might appear otherwise.

It is certain that Jacobs will not jeopardize the Schmeling-Louis gate, which may run anywhere from one to two millions, by putting either Max or Joe in with a too dangerous "[illegible]."

The Iramerks will present a full program of eight classes at championship weights: 112 lbs., 118 lbs., 126 lbs., 135 lbs., 147 lbs., 160 lbs., 175 lbs. and heavyweights.

Promises Amateur Tennis Lords One More Year

DULL FUTURE FOR U. S. WOMEN

New York, Sept. 13 (AP)—The long, cruel tennis war has ended; Donald Budge has the national championship he needed in his business, and now there's nothing to do but worry for the next twelve months or so.

The worrying will be about evenly divided between Budge, who is now a very austere young man, and officials of the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association, who put a pile of money in the treasury the past ten days because Budge was playing in their show. One more tournament like this, with capacity crowds the last two days, and they should be able to attach a wing to their big stadium at Forest Hills.

When Budge won that fifth and final set from Baron Gottfried Von Cramm of Germany late Saturday afternoon, adding the American championship to his "world" title won at Wimbledon, he paralyzed himself, so to speak, into a very large sum of currency. He could, by turning professional, assure himself something like $100,000, which is what both Ellsworth Vines and Fred Perry, who preceded Budge into the money ranks, are popularly believed to have salted away in the past year.

WILL WAIT A YEAR

But Budge has promised his old friends, the tennis fathers, faithfully, that he won't touch a cent of it for another year at least. They are counting on him to help defend the newly won Davis Cup next summer, and to draw those bumper crowds through the gates at the championships again.

Budge, the unbeatable, is gambling this fortune of, say, $100,000 that he can play another year of amateur tennis without being beaten, and without being seriously injured. He's wagering that he can win Wimbledon, Forest Hills and his Davis Cup matches again. If his best competition comes again next season from Von Cramm, Budge can no doubt do just that.

But there is a young man named Bobby Riggs coming up, also from California. It took Von Cramm five tough sets to lick him in the semi-finals, and he won't be 20 until next year. Bobby doesn't make any secret of his intentions. He means to win the championship and then cash in. He will be in there really gunning for Budge next year, fresh and as full of fight as a tarpon. Budge is leaving soon with his doubles mate, Gene Mako, for a winter of tennis in Australia, and he won't be so all-fired fresh when he returns. Such a tour nearly ruined Fred Perry, you remember.

The tennis officials need to worry only whether Don keeps his promise to give them another year of his valuable services. They are confident now that he will.

U. S. WOMEN MUST WAIT

Looking back on the championships, though, all this worry about the future is beside the point. The tournament was the most successful yet from a financial viewpoint, and it produced a couple of worthy champions. Anita Lizana, the spirited little half-pint from Chile, proved as great a standout in the women's division as Budge did in the men's. More or less under-rated throughout the play, the senorita showed Saturday's big crowd a brilliant all-around game in squelching Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, the Pole.

There isn't a girl playing with a backhand to approach Anita's, nor many with a forehand as steady on the crucial points. She has developed the drop-shot into a deadly offensive weapon, whereas most players employ it only occasionally as a sort of stunt shot or change of pace. And every time Jadwiga tried to retaliate with a chop just over the net, Anita knocked it down her throat.

There's no saying when America will get its women's title back. Helen Jacobs, beaten before the final both at Wimbledon and Forest Hills, is about through. Alice Marble was defeated in the quarter-finals by Dorothy Bundy, who in turn was overwhelmed by Lizana. There isn't anybody else nor any immediate prospects.

TERRY FEARS DODGERS

Can you imagine this? In Meeker, Okla., home town of Carl Hubbell, the boys are playing soft ball.

And the same is true in Harrah, where the Waner boys were born and raised.

Ossie Solem, new Syracuse coach, isn't fooling . . . He had his gang scrimmaging the second day out . . .

Believe it or not, but Bill Terry says he'd rather play the Cubs than the Dodgers any day in the week with the gonfalon at stake . . .

Specs are asking $50 a pair for tickets to Mike Jacobs' "Carnival of Champions" . . . Looks now like the show might do a half million coconuts . . .

Attention, Army: Carl "Columbus" Hinkle, Vanderbilt's fine center and captain, who hasn't made a bad pass in two years, heads for West Point as soon as he graduates . . .

PERRY MAKES BET

George Perry, the Yankees demon press agent, has promised to sleep on a cake of ice in a window of Jack Dempsey's restaurant if the Yanks don't win this year's World Series in four out of five.

Dr. Lou Little has his Columbia gridders drilling in shorts and sleeveless shirts . . .

The red face of Bob Quinn, generalissimo of the Boston Bees, gets redder every time he thinks of how he tried to send Vince DiMaggio back to the Coast . . .

In Baron von Cramm's book, Bobby Riggs, the California youngster, is the second best tennis player in America . . .

The Giants are the only Major League club to boast two Jewish players . . . Harry Danning and Phil Weintraub, who was acquired from the Cincinnati Reds . . .

Harry Jeffra, the bantamweight, is a slick golfer . . . He once shot a snappy 69 over a Baltimore course to lower the previous mark of 70, hung up by Bobby Cruickshank, the Richmond pro.

Golf tip: When the new rule permitting only 14 clubs goes into effect next January, Henry Picard, the Hershey (Pa.) pro, will tote the following: Driver, brassie, No. 4 wood, Nos. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9 irons, sand wedge or dynamiter, chipper and putter.

SHUTE SIGNS

Denny Shute, the P. G. A. champion, has signed to tutor at the Miami-Biltmore Club in Coral Gables, Fla.

Old Burleigh Grimes went out to the hill at Ebbets Field the other day to show the boys how to pitch in batting practice and George Cisar, a rookie from the Three-Eye League, hit three successive pitches into the left field bleachers.

Lou Ambers, the lightweight king, once rode the rails into New York to see Tony Canzoneri (his idol) fight Kid Chocolate. Later, Ambers won the title from Tony.

Reds Release Dressen and Staff

Cincinnati, Sept. 13 (AP)—General Manager Warren C. Giles of the Cincinnati Reds announced today the unconditional release of Manager Charles "Chuck" Dressen and Coaches Thomas Sheehan and George Kelley. Dressen will be replaced temporarily, Giles said, by Bobby Wallace, chief scout for the team, and salaries of the three released men will be paid in full to the end of the season.

To Examine Maine Grid Players

Orono, Me., Sept. 13—The entire University of Maine football squad will undergo a complete examination late today by Dr. George H. Coombs, state director of health, as a check against the possibility of infantile paralysis.

This checkup is due to the fact that Wayne H. Morrill of Cumberland Center, and football manager, has become a victim of the dreaded disease. When he was stricken last week it was at first thought to be grippe but was later diagnosed as a mild attack of infantile paralysis.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN
MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1937

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION
net paid average, 6 months ending March 31, 1937 268.637

Let All Take Part!

THE BOSTON parade that will honor the 150th birthday of the United States Constitution next Friday should be the greatest and most beautiful pageant in the history of Massachusetts.

Every town and every city in the Commonwealth should be represented, either by floats or delegations of citizens. No municipality is so hard-pressed financially that it must suffer the disgrace of absence.

All mayors and all selectmen should march. They owe that effort to themselves. They owe it especially to the people they serve.

The mills and factories of the State should send appropriate displays. The Constitution made America the foremost industrial nation in the world. There should be proper gratitude.

The workers, organized and unorganized, should walk or ride. Because there is a Bill of Rights, these men and women enjoy a freedom possible in no other country. They should rejoice.

Churches, regardless of creed or sect, should arrange for large delegations and elaborate floats. Religious tolerance and liberty were born here. For a century and a half they have endured. All churches owe a vast debt of thanks.

Each club, each society, each civic and patriotic organization should have many members in the parade ranks. Their existence depends on the Constitution. They ought to consider active participation a duty.

Schools, from the humble village classroom to the biggest university, should be to the front of the line. In America free education found a safe haven. The Constitution has kept it safe, fought off its enemies. Schools should express their appreciation.

Military organizations—the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Spanish War veterans, survivors of the Civil War and their auxiliaries—deserve a prominent position, as do the Army, Navy and Air Force. In war they protect the Constitution; in peace they serve it.

THE Sesquicentennial of the Constitution concerns every man, every woman and every child in Massachusetts.

It is the one occasion in the citizen's life when he can make an outward show of his affection for the document that made possible his FREE birth, his FREE life and his right to serve his God according to the dictates of his FREE soul.

Few who will join in the great celebration in Boston Friday will be living 50 years hence, when the 200th birthday of the Constitution will be observed.

It is, therefore, the only opportunity that most people will ever have to participate in an event of this kind.

So let everybody do his part to contribute the distinction and the honor that the occasion warrants.

Let the memory of the day live until a new generation again pays homage to the Constitution in the year 1987.

New England's for Him

THE approaching national convention of the American Legion, in New York City from September 20 to September 23, will be of especial interest to New England.

For the first time in Legion history, a New Englander, Attorney Daniel Doherty of Woburn, has an excellent chance of being elected commander.

His selection as leader of this foremost organization would be a welcome honor to this section, to all our former soldiers and sailors, and to the many splendid posts that have been formed in our six States since the Great War.

Attorney Doherty, 43 years of age, is a man of national prominence. His rise was literally from the ranks, for he has been post, county and state commander and national vice-commander.

But his real distinction is in his home city, where those who know him best have placed him on their city council and approved his appointment as assistant district attorney of Middlesex County.

Not all of us will be able to attend the Legion's big national convention. Yet in spirit we shall be there, every man, and our cheers as New Englanders will be for Daniel Doherty.

May he win!

A Blonde or a Brunette?

COLD science and wise experience clash, and the often-asked question, "Do gentlemen prefer blondes?" is the cause.

The American Psychological Association solemnly assures us that light gentlemen usually marry light women.

But Mrs. Hilda H. Quirk and other veterans of Boston's Marriage Bureau cannot agree.

"Brunet men prefer blondes, and light men favor brunettes," they say. "As a matter of inherent human nature, both men and women are attracted by qualities which they themselves do not possess."

Both views are probably correct. There is no hard and fast rule in love and marriage. Cupid spurns regimentation. When the RIGHT one comes along, we marry.

A Charity or a Racket?

THE State Department at Washington makes the startling statement that many of the groups which have been licensed to collect moneys for the aid of those "fighting for democracy in Spain" sent nothing at all TO SPAIN.

One group which received $30,753 from gullible persons spent $25,793 of it in "a relief drive."

The Central Spanish Relief Committee in Washington, according to the Government's figures, made this showing: Receipts $11,832.15. Sent to Spain, NOTHING.

If this is CHARITY or MERCY, it would be interesting to know just what the word RACKET means.

Nothing grieves a politician or a tax collector more than to see something valuable which is not taxed.

That is why there is so much official grieving over the magnificent philanthropies of the late Andrew W. Mellon.

After paying the Government millions of dollars a year in taxes, and establishing a great art museum for the American people, Mr. Mellon left the remainder of his fortune to the public as a great Charity Foundation, and the politicians fear that they cannot confiscate the money.

That Foundation will do untold good in the service of humanity.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

New York, Sept. 13—Diary: Telegrams from the film funsters W. C. Fields and Ted Healy. So out and had a snack at a stool lunch and the counterman and I grew grave over the muddled state of the world. Then to see Peggy Hoyt and Aubrey Eads, just back from the Continent.

This day I was taken to task about the length of my hair and sundry sartorial neglects and made promises of neatness. Then to say farewell to Justine Hall and her mother against departing for Florida to live. And talking to Vincent Youmans newly come, also, from a stay in Europe.

To Fannie Hurst's dinner for Daniel Frohman and August Heckshe at Billy the Oysterman's. Afterward strolling on lower Broadway and past the Marbridge building where I had my first New York office, and Keene's chop house where I used to lunch with so many now gone.

The most enthusiastic feminine night club patron is Beatrice Lillie. There is scarcely a night when she is playing in New York that she does not form a duo or foursome for a drop-in at one or more of the supper spots and if she is appearing in one herself goes to those that are snappiest at dawn.

Night club entertainers like to see her at their tables, for she is appreciative and now and then, too, can be persuaded to step out on the floor and add to the hilarity with one of her own skits.

Entertainers are also going in for sports on the side with gusto. Jim Barton was among first to own and manage a semi-professional ball team on Long Island. Joe Cook is also owner of a team in Pennsylvania and Joe E. Brown had a heavy interest in a lesser league team.

Bing Crosby's string of race horses have cost him a neat chunk of hard-earned money, but he claims the excitement worth it.

Kate Smith is the owner of a professional basket ball team and Gertrude Niesen has a financial interest in Bob Nestel, the boxer.

For oblivion: parsley and capers as garnish for food, parsnips, self plugs for radio entertainers, and that silly beautiful-boy publicity for Robert Taylor.

Charles M. Schwab recently completed his 178th crossing of the Atlantic, thus making him America's No. 1 ocean voyager among paid passengers. Next to the steel merchant in the number of crossings is Gilbert Miller, theatrical man, whose number is far over 100.

Mr. Schwab's years of ocean voyaging have, of course, taught him the trick of traveling light. He rarely takes a trunk and usually three pieces of luggage comprise his baggage. He travels with his valet and never makes plans. He may, after lunch, some day tell his secretary he wants to depart on a midnight boat. His passports are up to the minute.

So carefully is his personal staff organized that he merely goes to the ship at sailing time and everything—cabin, deck chair, dining room place and all have been arranged. [illegible] his early crossings he suffered sea sickness but today he can buck the heaviest gale without qualm.

My first crossing was in a 75-mile gale all the way on the old Mauretania. Just before [illegible] Plymouth, I staggered to the cabin door, peered out and a steward swaying in the companionway, chirped: "A bit tippy, sir."

Bagatelles: Max Beerbohm enjoys smoking only in complete solitude . . . Paderewski cured himself of insomnia by indulging fatiguing walks . . . Winston Churchill is a pushover for high button shoes with dove gray tops . . . Billy Rose has made the biggest fortune a showman ever made in five years.

Chant after an evening in the suburbs:

In a local train in the evening hours,
Traveling slowly back to the city,
Jammed with suit cases, babies, flowers—
It's not my idea of Sitting Pretty.

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Edwin C. Hill

Two striking anniversaries appear in the news. Today is the 123rd birthday of our national anthem, "The Star Spangled Banner." It is also the 77th birthday of General John J. Pershing, whose two million men in France and Flanders fought gloriously under those same stripes and stars.

"What, indeed, would be more fitting and appropriate than that the birthday of the song which salutes the flag of our country should fall on the anniversary of the great general who carried that flag to victory in the greatest war in the history of the world?"

The flag, indeed, was born in the shock and travail of war, and the national anthem was inspired while British guns were hammering away at Fort Henry, off Baltimore. It was then, in "the rocket's red glare," that Philip Barton Key saw the flag so gallantly streaming.

INSPIRED BY BATTLE

As for General Pershing, he comes to 77 in fair health and, we hear, excellent spirits. He spends much of his time in France, directing the activities of the commissions which supervise the cemeteries of our soldier dead and erect splendid memorials to the young men on the fields of battle where they died. A fine job for the old general—important, dignified, wholly in keeping.

Francis Scott Key's manuscript of "The Star Spangled Banner" is still in existence; 32 lines of writing in small, neat hand. An ordinary sheet of note paper, yellowed, time-stained. Those lines were set down under the strangest of circumstances, under the impulse of terrific drama.

Key, living in Baltimore, lawyer and poet, had enlisted in the militia to fight the Red Coats after the British captured Washington, the national capital, and did their best to burn down the White House. They were bent, too, on capturing Baltimore, and had assembled a fleet out in the roadstead to batter Fort McHenry into surrender.

While those British cannon were getting the range and preparing to open up the bombardment, Francis Scott Key got into a small boat and had himself rowed out to the British flagship under a flag-of-truce.

He went to appeal on behalf of a friend, Dr. William Beanes, who had been captured by the British and was being held prisoner.

WORDS FROM THE HEART

The admiral and his staff greeted Key courteously, accepted his assurance that Dr. Beanes had treated British wounded with no less care than he had given to American wounded, and ordered the doctor's release from the ship's prison.

But the admiral explained it was impossible, for the time being, to send them back to land. The bombardment was about to begin. They must await the result.

And then the British guns rained shot and shell on Fort McHenry. Francis Key saw the screaming shells explode against the bastions as the fleet moved in. Flying from those bastions was the flag of the young Republic—the flag of red and white stripes, with white stars on a square blue field in the upper left-hand corner.

Proud, defiant and untouched, it snapped in the breeze all that afternoon. And then the sun dropped down and dusk came on and night fell blackly over all.

But through the night the British guns roared on and Francis Key could follow the arching flight of the red-hot shells. His heart tightened at every cannon's roar, for fear that fort and city were doomed.

In silence and the dark, he paced the deck in painful suspense, peering through the blackness toward the fort, praying for daylight, wondering if the flag was still there.

And then the light came, spreading rapidly, and the first beams of the rising sun bathed in glory the shimmering stars and stripes. The attack had failed.

And Francis Scott Key returning to shore, put down on scraps of paper the lines that had burned into his brain as the British cannon hammered Fort McHenry. And that night, in a Baltimore hotel he wrote down, upon a sheet of note paper, the 32 lines that became the anthem of the Republic—"The Star Spangled Banner"—"O, long may it wave, o'er the land of the free and the home of the brave!"

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

TAKE IT FROM ME

A woman is not really overworked until she is too busy to stop to look in a millinery window and too rushed to glance in a mirror to see if her nose needs powdering.

In most of the screen plays, these days, the girls do all the courting and proposing. But in real life, they would have to do it much more artfully and less eagerly, or it would take the edge off the most ardent man's enthusiasm and frighten a shy man out of his wits.

After training himself for a few years, a married man becomes so adept that he can read his newspaper with one set of brain-cells and listen to his wife's conversation with another set—and time his "Yes, dears" perfectly.

Even when a man knows that he wants to marry a girl she usually has to X-ray his mind and explain it to him with a chart before he will ADMIT it.

A bachelor is not always a misogynist; sometimes he is merely an altruist who refrains from wasting ALL of his love on one woman, so that he may generously scatter sweetness and light amongst the multitude.

Bible Text: Fear God and keep His commandments. This is the whole duty of man. Ecclesiastes XII., 13.

Young America Speaks

By Elsie Robinson

Elsie Robinson

Suppose you were a "big boss," in need of an assistant, faced with a line of bright, eager youngsters—19 of them, straight and whole, the 20th as intelligent as the others and perhaps even more willing and capable, but crippled.

Would you give the cripple as fair a deal as the others?

Life may have been kind to YOU—you may never have had to face that question. But thousands of others do daily.

And because they do, we're printing this letter from Marlow Munns—a game lad, if ever there was one—with a $10 thanks-prize for opening our hearts to a pitiful problem.

"Dear Elsie Robinson:

"My question is—Has a Cripple a Chance to Make Good in Competition with Able-bodied Workers?

"I'm a high school graduate and have good ground work in a business education, such as typing, shorthand and bookkeeping. I'm eager to give all I have to a job. But my legs are weak and I'm a little undersized. So no matter how hard I try, I can't seem to find a break.

"I live on a farm and there's plenty of work for me to do, and for my brother, who is also a cripple. We do enough work to more than pay for our food and lodging. We could go on like this forever.

"BUT WE DON'T WANT TO. WE'RE PROUD AND AMBITIOUS. WE WANT TO MAKE A PLACE FOR OURSELVES IN LIFE LIKE OTHER MEN, NOT SPEND OUR DAYS HOEING POTATOES, DRAGGING HEAVY PAILS OF FOOD FOR THE PIGS. ISN'T THERE SUCH A CHANCE FOR US ANYWHERE?

"I don't want pity . . . nor even sympathy . . . nor help just because I am a cripple. I want a chance to prove that I have what it takes. If I can't hold a job on my ability alone, then I don't want it.

"MARLOW W. MUNNS,
"Fennimore, Wis."
($10 Prize Winner)

Your legs may be twisted, lad—but no spunkier back-bone or straighter heart ever spoke its piece in this column. Here's to you—and hoping HARD that someone will lend you a hand.

WOMEN "DICTATORS"

Remember that last week we promised to show you what the girls would do if they "were dictator for a day"? Well, here come a couple of potential Madame Mussolinis—with more than twelve thousand more clamoring for space. Better take a tip, boys, and get ready for a lady President. Sure as Heaven made little apples, there's one on the way.

Enter Florence Margaret Haley of Edgewater, Col., and does Florence know what she wants? We'll say she does! Listen!

"MARRIAGE—

"Mental and physical examination compulsory before a license is granted. Immediate psychopathic treatment for those who participate in child marriages.

"EDUCATION—

"Make high school compulsory but, instead of giving scattered courses which prepare for nothing, give four years of practical training in any chosen work from domestic science to carpentering.

"CHARITY—

"Do away with our present demoralizing system of handouts and start a program of systematic saving for old age.

"BUSINESS—

"Curb machines and keep down over-production. Consider the men first and arrange production so that all men have a job. Absolutely no married woman should be allowed to work unless her mate is completely unfit.

"GENERAL GOVERNMENT—

"Start a war reform. Start a system of education against war. Treat people who want war as savages.

"Reform our taxation program. Post bulletins in state capitals so taxpayers may know exactly where their money goes.

"Exterminate grafting politicians.

"Make uniform traffic and speed laws all over the U. S. A.

"Florence M. Haley,
"Edgewater, Colo."
($10 Prize Winner)

Strenuous housekeeping, yes? But don't think, for a minute, that this girl sent all the best advice.

Here's some from little Dorothy Greene, of Americus, Ga., who is only 14 years old, yet submits one of the finest plans for marriage that was received. Her other suggestions are good, too, but because of lack of space we're giving just her "Wedding plans."

"Every couple who married," says Dorothy, "would have to declare the fact seven months beforehand and both bride and groom would be compelled to enroll in a school (either day or night attendance) which would train them for marriage.

"There would be courses in this school touching every phase of marriage. Mental, moral and physical fitness must be assured before graduation. After graduation they would be handed permits to marry. No one whose ancestry makes him unfit, or who is under age, could possibly marry.

"And while the students are studying, they would be studied and given advice on their particular problems, to avoid any possible cause of divorce.

"DOROTHY GREENE,
"Americus, Ga."
($5 prize winner)

Which, says I, is GOING SOME for such a very little Lady Boss!

AND ONCE MORE—LET ME HEAR FROM YOU. Prizes are awarded every Monday. Write on some subject already discussed—better still, on any subject you consider important to Young America. Read the rules—THEN GRAB YOUR PEN!

RULES

Each Monday, Miss Robinson publishes three letters and awards $25 in prizes: $10 each to the writers of the first two, $5 to the writer of the third.

Writers must be no more than 30 years of age.

Subjects should be of interest to Young America.

In Today's News

By Bond Bliss

On the war fronts.

FIRST—EUROPE.

Russia thundered again, reiterating the charges that Italy was the pirate of the Mediterranean, that its submarines had sunk Russian vessels. Rome was strangely silent. For Mussolini is usually eager to roar himself. Put your ear to the ground. Do you hear the murmur of marching feet, the whir of wings? Drums.

The press talked. In Italy it denounced the Russian note as a "second provocation—contrary to diplomatic custom."

In Russia the official army paper threatened individual Soviet action to obtain redress to end the "intolerable situation." The Communist official paper said the silence of Great Britain and France raised doubts as to decisions coming from the Mediterranean conference.

Yes! Fight. Conflict always settles everything so nicely.

SECOND—SPAIN.

Insurgents and Loyalists battled on land. On sea, British and French war craft sped to the scene of a Mediterranean naval clash. To watch. To participate? It is like a three-ring circus. There is too much to see.

American Secretary of State Hull in Washington characterized the activity of unidentified raiders in the Mediterranean as a promiscuous situation growing gradually more acute. Undoubtedly! So far we are not concerned there. Fortunately.

Once the United States ended piracy in the Mediterranean. But that was when we were a weak, unimportant nation. In China the Americans are told to get out, lower the flag.

The United States is adopting the old Wilsonian policy of inviting insults. Pacifism. Peace at any price. Which led to war. And will again. Whereas a firm stand, commanding respect from the beginning, might keep us out.

"Dollar diplomacy" is to be preferred to dumb diplomacy.

THIRD—ASIA.

Shanghai Americans are not so cowardly. Even if their country does desert them. Yet the United States has a fleet and marines on the scene. Offering a target. And to what purpose if there is no protection intended?

Japan massacres more Chinese civilians trying to flee. Japan is very skilled in killing the unarmed masses.

Tokyo voted more for war. It will not be halted. Not by China alone.

Two war fronts draw together. China registered its new Soviet anti-aggression pact with the League of Nations. Denied Bolshevization. Soviet frontier authorities detained a Japanese armed cutter.

Thus the lineups form. Japan, Italy, Germany versus Russia and China. Where do Britain and France stand, where democracy? That will decide the issue in the end. As before.

FOURTH—SOUTH AMERICA.

Revolt in Paraguay. Fighting in Asuncion. Military coup attempted to restore deposed President Franco to office. But President Paiva's troops apparently won. It was a Latin type of election.

But over in the Philippines the women were enfranchised, granted the right to vote. That is the true method of democracy. If properly exercised.

FIFTH—NORTH AMERICA.

Better wars. That against disease, the spread of infantile paralysis. Public health service reported 612 cases for the week. Largest numbers in Chicago, which wages valiant fight. Schools kept closed and children barred from public places. War for youth, for health, for life. Carry on! Cheer that conflict. Pray for its success.
